Team lauds Kingdom's progress U.S. likely to amend alien corruption act

By Scott Pendleton

RIYADH, Nov. 29 — Congress will amend the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1977 by February or March, Rep. Joel Pritchard, R-Washington, told a group of American businessmen here Sunday. Although he didn't detail the changes that would be made, Pritchard indicated that they would offer some relief to American businessmen.

The act is widely hated by American businessmen overseas because they believe it places them at a tremendous disadvantage when competing against businessmen from other countries, while failing to accomplish what was intended.

Pritchard admitted that the act incorporated "fuzzy American thinking at its worst." "One of the worst things is the title," he added. "It's awfully hard to vote for corruption."

Pritchard said that modifications to the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act had already passed the Senate and are bound for House of Representatives. He wasn't sure what exact changes would be made, since the house would certainly make some modifications of its own, he said.

Pritchard said he was convinced that relief was forthcoming, noting that the Reagan administration strongly favors it. A U.S. government interagency group on export disincentives has estimated the minimum losses attributable to the act to be $1 billion.

Pritchard and five other congressmen who are members of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee of International Trade and Commerce visited Saudi Arabia for two days. They spent Saturday in Dhahran, where Aramco gave them an air tour of the oil fields and facilities. Sunday they breakfasted with American businessmen and visited Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani.

The other congressmen were George Crockett, D-Michigan; Arlen Erdahl, R-Minnesota; Daniel Vica, D-Florida; Toby Roth, R-Wisconsin; and Robert Shamansky, D-Ohio.

Of the six congressmen, only Pritchard had previously visited the Kingdom. Asked their impressions, Shamansky said, "I've never

Italy 'black' economy dips

ROME, Nov. 29 (AFP) — The effects of recession have now spread even as far as the so-called underground or black economy in Italy which, when it was discovered some 10 years ago, was seen as the explanation for the mysterious strength of Italian industry.

The Social Study Center known as Censis has commented in its 15th report that current confusion in the economy partly reflects the need for a pause after excessively fast growth and structural change.

The institute's summary of the last 10 years points to contradictory phenomena. On the one hand Italy has consolidated its position in international trade raising its share from six percent in 1971 to 7.5 percent this year thanks to "Japanese style" growth.

On the other hand the country has not gone far enough in redrawing its structure and developing new strong industries, preferring instead to consolidate its exports of traditional "Made in Italy" goods such as leather, ware, clothes, decorations and cars.

But the failure to look for new ideas in these sectors is partly responsible for a total of 100,000 lay-offs in the textile industry. The auto, steel and chemical industries are in deep trouble, and the so-called industrial triangle in Northern Italy is slipping deeper into crisis.

Censis said this is the logical consequence of uncontrolled evolution, and the institute pointed to three broad phases of development since the beginning of the 1960s.

First, there was a period of full prosperity when the economy was organized around big companies in key sectors. In 1960 the merger between Iontecauini and Edison created Montedison which became the eighth biggest chemical company in the world. Meanwhile Fiat became a world known name.

Toward the end of the decade this kind of development was halted by objections from students and workers. But between 1970 and 1978 the economy continued to grow as a whole range of industries began to boom in medium sized towns.

With this development came the birth of the underground economy, involving work in the home or in small workshops operating unofficially but more or less openly. Censis

14 members affected Suzuki to reshuffle cabinet

TOKYO, Nov. 29 (R) — Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki is expected to announce a major reshuffle of his 21-member cabinet Monday Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) sources said Sunday. They said up to two-thirds of the cabinet would be moved to new jobs or dropped.

The post of foreign minister, currently held by Sunao Sonoda, is expected to go either to LDP Secretary General Yoshio Sakurachi, 69, or Tokusaburo Kosaka, a 65-year-old businessman turned politician.

But finance minister Michio Watanabe, 58, and Economic Planning Agency head Toshio Komoto, 70, are expected to retain their posts in the shake-up which was planned partly to end inter-ministerial squabbling over new trade measures.

Administrative Management Agency chief Yasuhiro Nakasone, 63, is expected to continue in charge of administrative and financial reform on which Suzuki, 70, has staked his political future.

Widows' wranglings keep man's body in cold storage

NAIROBI, Nov. 29 (AFP) — For more than a month, the body of a Kenyan VIP has lain in cold storage in the Nairobi mortuary while his two widows wrangle over where it should be buried. At first glance, the quarrel seems petty — if undeniably macabre. But the issue has become something of a Cause Celebre in Kenya, and the attention given it throws powerful light on the cultural conflicts that exist in this, one of the most Westernized of African states.

John Goddard Mburu was government commissioner for Kenya's western province when he died, in his late 50s, on Oct. 27 in a Nairobi hospital after a four-month illness. Born in the Murang'a district of central Kenya, he had become a wealthy man, with farms in both the West and center of the country.

Along the way, Mburu married Carmelina Ngami in 1953, but the couple remained childless and separated in 1963. Mburu's Kikuyu people — the Kikuyu dominate Kenya's political scene — place a high value on children.

Later, he married Mary Nduta, and they had six offspring.

When Mburu died, his first wife and his elder brother said Mburu's father had wished for him to be buried alongside the father, on land now owned by the brother in Murang'a.

This course, by some readings of Kikuyu customary law, would have strengthened any claims by the brother and first wife on Mburu's property.

The second wife said he should be interred at a farm where they had lived for a time at Mharuk, near Nakuru in the Rift Valley province. This, it appeared, would bolster the claim of his children to the Mburu estate.

Each wife filed a petition in the high court temporarily barring burial in the other's chosen site, and Mburu's body languished in the morgue with police guarding it against any would-be body-snatchers.

The dispute burst into the open during November, in a series of well-publicized hearings during which Kikuyu elders, called to the stand to establish tribal custom, testified to such esoterica as the fact that Kikuyu people used to throw bodies out into communal land for byenas to munch on.

Roman Catholic clergymen were also called, including a bishop who spoke uncomfortably of the sensitivity of the case, admonished reporters from the stand not to misquote him and was in turn warned by the judge not to embarrass the church. Mburu and his first two wives (it appears he later took another) were Catholics.

In many African contexts, it is Western tradition with its generation-to-generation system of inheritance that takes the part of children against the father's brothers, who by tribal law are often considered the rightful heirs.

In this case, however, the tables were turned. Bishop Caesar Mary Gatimu testified that Carmelina, the first wife, was Mburu's legitimate spouse, thus supporting her case and that of the brother. The second wife, Mary, countered that the church had at least partly accepted her union with Mburu by allowing her to take communion and by giving him the last rites.

Debris litters capital Syrian car blast kills 64; 135 hurt

DAMASCUS, Nov. 29 (R) — A car bomb erupted in the crowded heart of Damascus Sunday, killing 64 people and wounding 135, the Syrian government reported. An official spokesman issued the casualty figures as firemen and rescue teams struggled to remove bodies crushed under debris in the bustling Al-Azbakiya quarter of the Syrian capital.

Rescuers commandeered private cars and trucks to rush victims to hospitals from the Azbakiya district where the booby-trapped auto exploded near an army recruiting center, the witnesses said.

"This is a very crowded area, in which one has to walk shoulder to shoulder with people passing by," said a longtime resident of the Syrian capital who viewed the explosion's aftermath.

Witnesses said the driver of the bomb car was apparently among the killed.

In Beirut a group calling itself the Front for the Liberation of Foreigners from Lebanon has claimed responsibility for a string of blasts against Syrian and Palestinian targets in Lebanon.

The call came to the Beirut offices of the French news agency, Agence France Presse. In calls following the explosions in Lebanon, the persons making the calls said the group's goal was to drive the Palestinians and Syrians from Lebanese soil.

The Syrians have a 22,000-strong peace keeping force in Lebanon policing the aftermath of the Lebanese civil war that ended in late 1976.

Other bombings have hit the Syrian capital, the most recent being in the first week of October when two people died and several

Mitterrand visits Algeria today

ALGIERS, Nov. 29 (R) — French President Francois Mitterrand flies to Algeria Monday for a two-day visit which both sides hope will lead to closer political ties. Bitter memories of the eight-year guerrilla war that led up to Algeria's independence in 1962 have previously hindered progress toward reconciliation between France and its former colony.

While France has remained Algeria's main trading partner, there has been a deep political gulf between the two countries.

But since taking office in May, Mitterrand has made it clear that closing the gulf with the fellow-Socialist government in Algiers is a key aim of his administration.

Visiting Algiers in August, External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson said: "From the point of view of political ideas, the Socialist majority in France is very close to Socialist Algeria."

The change of tone was not lost on the Algerian government. "Relations between Algeria and France have seen a notable improvement since the left took power in France," said a spokesman.

In recent months, the two governments have been seeking ways of eliminating obstacles to reconciliation, many of which are highly emotive.

The French government is committed to improving the lot of Algerian workers and their dependents now living in France, estimated at 800,000. It has offered a moratorium for illegal immigrants to legalize their situation and has guaranteed social security coverage for all.

The Algerian authorities, meanwhile, have agreed to discuss the question of allowing the transfer to France of funds blocked in the country since independence. French officials in Paris said the negotiations had made considerable progress.

But two main probms remain: Algeria's proposed new price structure for its gas exports, and its demand for the return of Algerian official records from the colonial era held in France since 1962.

On the gas question, Algeria last year set to establish a parity between gas and crude oil prices which the French — about to increase in 1982 imports from four billion to nine billion cubic meters — refused. It would have meant a doubling of the purchase price.

The two countries are agreed on the need for progress in the North-South dialogue and in their support for the inter-African peace-keeping force being sent to Chad.

3 states to build joint oil refinery

BAHRAIN, Nov. 29 (SA) — Three Gulf countries including Bahrain, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are considering building a $600 million plant here to process heavy fuel oil into lighter and more valuable products, a spokesman of the Ministry of Industry said Sunday.

Studies were formally inaugurated over the weekend for the heavy oil conversion company, owned 40 percent by Bahrain and 30 percent each by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. The plant would process up to 80,000 barrels per day of heavy fuel from refineries in the three countries and elsewhere in the Gulf into naphta, kerosene, diesel fuel and other products.

Oil would be brought to Bahrain by tanker and pipeline.

Saudia sets performance record

JEDDAH, Nov. 29 (SPA) — Saudia, the national carrier, has achieved considerable progress in operational performance — a matter that gave it an eminent position among the major airlines of the world, the airline said Sunday.

It realized a record success Nov. 21, when its average operational performance reached 96.8 percent in take-off and 95.2 percent in landing operations. The monthly average of operational accuracy in the month of November was 91.7 percent in take-off and 88.7 percent in landing.

On April 16, 1979, the accuracy in operational performance was recorded at 96 percent for take-off, which was the highest average ever achieved by Saudia. With continuous improvement, the national carrier successfully occupied an eminent position among the 10 best airlines of the world. Saudia's Director General Capt. Ahmad Mattar has, meanwhile, urged the airline's personnel to double their efforts to achieve still better level of performance. He congratulated them for their gigantic efforts which enabled the national carrier to occupy a distinguished status among the world airlines.

said that the country industrialized "clandestinely."

Between 1978 and 1980 the economy experienced a mini-boom matched only in Japan as domestic demand grew strongly and export markets remained eager for Italian goods.

But when the recession came, it was felt immediately in October 1980 by the Fiat giant which is regarded as a barometer of the economy. Within a few months, three years of inflation running at more than 20 percent a year coupled with the highest interest rates in Europe, meant that the effects of the recession spread rapidly.

Consequently state aid for companies is used with increasing frequency to cope with deficits instead of for investment. Service industries are expanding abnormally fast. They have grown by eight percent in five years and account for 49.8 percent of the labor force.

Assad's ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party has blamed the fundamentalist Muslim Brotherhood for a number of explosions over the past two years.

Twenty pedestrians were killed and 50 suffered wounds Sept. 3 when a bomb-laden car exploded near Syria's air force command headquarters in Damascus neighborhood.

"One block of construction would be a major development in my district," Mica said. "Here it's on every block."

The purpose of the trip, Pritchard said, was to "get a frame of reference so as you read the news it sticks better." The group also visited Israel, and flew on to Cairo from Riyadh.

Mica noted that, although he has been on the House Foreign Affairs Committee for three years, and discusses the Middle East daily, this was his first trip to the area.

"Now I can put it into context, and I'm impressed with what I've seen," he said.

During the breakfast with American businessmen, the congressmen also discussed domestic political issues.

Civil service graduates to get bonus

RIYADH, Nov. 29 (SPA) — The royal order for the payment of SR50,000 gift to every university graduate, to serve the government, has not differentiated between a man or a woman graduate, Sheikh Turki Khaled Al-Suairi, general president of the Civil Service Board, announced here Sunday.

Suairi stated that a university graduate was entitled to this sum, as long as he or she was a regular student and was appointed to a job after the declaration of the royal order and joined the state service from June 30, 1981. The order covered all graduates, no matter whether they were sent abroad or worked inside the Kingdom, he said.

Dealing with education service cadres, the civil service board chief said the teaching job, particularly public education, has a special nature quite different from the rest of public jobs. In view of its great value and importance, the state has always expressed its appreciation of workers in the field of education by way of introducing incentives which are in conformity with the nature of this noble profession, he said.

In Sinai peace force

Israel defers decision on EEC role

TEL AVIV, Nov. 29 (R) — The Israeli cabinet Sunday postponed a decision on whether to accept European troops in a multinational force to patrol the Sinai after Israel's withdrawal from the area next April. The cabinet held a short meeting at the hospital room where Prime Minister Menachem Begin is recovering from an operation on a fractured thigh.

A cabinet spokesman said another meeting will be held Monday to hear a report from Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir on his talks with U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig on Israel's objections to terms set by four European countries for participation in the Sinai peacekeeping force.

The cabinet had been expected to postpone a decision on whether to accept British, French, Italian and Dutch troops in the force. Cabinet sources said the ministers would first consider proposals brought by Shamir from Washington on the issue.

The spokesman said Deputy Prime Minister Simcha Ehrlich would chair Monday's cabinet meeting but he did not say whether a decision on the multinational force would be taken.

The spokesman said Sunday's meeting had been kept short on doctors' orders. Begin fractured his left thigh bone last Thursday when he fell in his bathroom and doctors Sunday reported him to be in satisfactory condition.

Shamir went to Washington at short notice last Friday after Begin and other Israeli leaders rejected the political terms which accompanied the four European states' agreement to deploy troops in Sinai.

The Israelis were angered by the reaffirmation of the European Economic Community's call for Palestinian self-determination and participation of the Palestine Liberation Organization in Middle East peace negotiations.

BRIEFS

LONDON, (R) — The leftists were executed in three Iranian towns on Friday and Saturday for political crimes, the Tehran evening newspaper Ettelaat reported Sunday.

CAIRO, (R) — Somali President Muhammed Siad Barre arrived in Cairo Sunday and officials said he would brief President Hosni Mubarak on last week's Arab summit. Siad Barre attended the summit in Fez, Morocco, but Egypt was suspended from the Arab League after its 1979 peace treaty with Israel.

IZMIR, Turkey, (AP) — Turkish military authorities on Sunday announced the arrest of 25 suspected members of a leftist terrorist cell.

PARIS, (AFP) — Libya, Ethiopia and South Yemen, who signed a tripartite last August, are to increase their cooperation in the information field, the Libyan News Agency Jana monitored here reported Sunday.

ISLAMABAD, (AFP) — A six-member Omani delegation led by Ahmad Ben Abdullah al Ghazali, minister for land affairs and municipalities, arrived here Sunday for talks on economic cooperation.

TUNIS, (AFP) — Former Tunisian Foreign Minister Hassan Belkhouja died at his home Sunday at the age of 61, official sources said here.

Habib arrives for Beirut talks

BEIRUT, Nov. 29 (Agencies) — American special Middle East envoy Philip Habib flew into Beirut Sunday morning on the first leg of a mission to build on what sources said were the "peaceful foundations" he helped develop in earlier forays in the troubled region.

As is the officially retired diplomat's style, he refused to talk to reporters at Beirut International Airport.

"He will be meeting with several Lebanese officials, and others, and will assess the peaceful foundations from previous visits," said one well-placed source.

The American Embassy here said nothing of substance about Habib's agenda, though a knowledgeable embassy source confirmed to the Associated Press that the envoy will meet Monday with Lebanese Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan, Speaker of Parliament Kamel Assad and Foreign Minister Fuad Boutros.

Lebanese President Elias Sarkis was in Europe for a medical checkup, but the independent daily Al-Nahar, along with a source in Lebanon's foreign ministry, said Habib would return to Beirut to meet Sarkis, likely after visiting Israel on Tuesday or Wednesday.

Habib is also expected to visit Saudi Arabia and Syria.

Israeli vehicles stoned

Explosion kills man in Gaza

TEL AVIV, Nov. 29 (Agencies) — A Gaza resident identified as Ibrahim Ibrahim, 23, was killed by an explosion early Sunday, a Palestinian source said here. Israeli military investigators summoned several members of the victim's family for questioning, the source said.

It was the first violent incident reported in more than three months in Gaza.

Meanwhile, Palestinians in two West Bank towns threw rocks at Israeli military vehicles and a civilian bus Sunday in a resurgence of anti-Israeli violence apparently tied to the anniversary of the 1947 U.N. Resolution establishing Jewish statehood.

Military sources said youths set up a road block of stones and a burning fire outside a teachers' seminary in Ramallah, north of Jerusalem, and stoned a passing military vehicle. A similar incident occurred outside Kalandia refugee camp near Ramallah, the sources said.

Soviet adviser seeks Brezhnev help

PESHAWAR, Pakistan, Nov. 29 (R) — A senior Soviet adviser held by Afghan Freedom fighters for two months has appealed directly to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to help arrange his release, the leader of the fighters said here Sunday.

Yunus Khalis, who heads a faction of the Hezbe Islami resistance group, released at a news conference copies of a letter which he said the adviser wrote on Nov. 11 telling Brezhnev that he was his last hope.

F.R. Okrunyuk, 48, the Soviet Union's senior adviser on ecology, was kidnapped in Kabul in September by Yunus Khalis' faction, which wants to exchange him for about 50 of its supporters held in Afghanistan.

In his letter to Brezhnev, the Soviet adviser said he had served the Soviet Union sincerely all his life and earnestly sought Brezhnev's help. "Only you can do it," he wrote.

Israeli attack not imminent -- UNIFIL

BEIRUT, Nov. 29 (AP) — Amid recurring reports of tension between Israel and the Palestinians in southern Lebanon, the commander of the United Nations forces here was quoted Sunday as saying he has no evidence of an impending Israeli assault.

"For today, we have no indication that there will be such an attack," Gen. William Callaghan, commander of the 6,000-strong

United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon, was quoted as saying.

His remarks appeared in the Lebanese English-language weekly magazine Monday Morning.

"We don't say there is no possibility, however. It has been done before and it can be done again," the magazine quoted the Irish general as saying.

Think twice before you buy a Lift Truck

Think once-do you want the best in lift trucks? The answer is Caterpillar.
Think twice-do you want the best in back up service? The answer is Zahid Tractor.

When you buy any one of the 40 models of Caterpillar Lift Truck you're buying a piece of precision engineering with 75 years of experience and technology behind it – but that's not all; you're acquiring Zahid Tractor's unique and comprehensive facilities –

- * expert advice on choice of Lift Truck most suitable for your material handling requirements.
- * a complete Preventive Maintenance service.
- * Kingdom-wide parts & Service availability.
- * operator training.

These are facilities you cannot afford to be without – that's why you buy a lot more than a lift truck when you buy Caterpillar. That's why it will pay you to think once... think twice. You will never regret buying a Caterpillar.

Why Caterpillar is best.

Reliability and quality

Caterpillar Lift Trucks are designed by experts; manufactured from top quality materials and components.

Strength

The full box section design frame is closed on all four sides using heavy duty steel offering extreme resistance to the strains of severe application.

Engine

Caterpillar Lift Trucks are powered by CAT & PERKINS, engines known for their reliability, durability, simplicity of design and excellent performance.

Transmission

Heavy duty powershift transmission allows on-the-go shifting, increasing your Lift Truck's productivity.

Steering

Fully hydrostatic steering mounted on a massive steel beam has no periodic lubrication points, providing durability, ease of handling, and less maintenance.

Mast

Besides giving the necessary and excellent visibility, mast shocks are transmitted to the special masts frames and not to the drive axle which can severely affect the operator's performance.

Tilts

Because the tilts are pin mounted this results in more flexibility and prevents leakage.

Serviceability

No daily lubrication points and only 8 lubrication points needing lubrication at 500 hour intervals, combine with easy access to all major components simplify servicing and reduce maintenance costs.

Why Zahid is best.

P.M. Service

Preventive Maintenance is a carefully planned systematic programme of inspecting, testing, adjusting and servicing carried out by trained and experienced engineers using specially designed tools and equipment. P.M. keeps your Lift Truck at peak performance and reduces the chances of costly breakdowns and major repairs.

Parts

Zahid Tractor provide an 87% parts availability throughout the Kingdom.

Operator Training

We train your Lift Truck Operator in the best use of your machine – the 'right' and 'wrong' about Lift Truck operation and the day-to-day maintenance.

Vehicle range

Over forty different models for you to choose from 1 to 27 tons – diesel, petrol, LPG or electric powered with cushion, or pneumatic tyres. There are hundreds of different attachments available for handling all kinds of material.

Every lift truck in the big Caterpillar range is built to the same exacting standards and backed up by Zahid Tractor's first class service.

So think once, think twice: think Caterpillar and Zahid Tractor.

TEHRAN'S HYPOCRISY

Ever since the Iranian revolution came to power the government, or what appears to be a government, has been professing a strongly anti-Israeli policy and calls for concerted efforts to liberate the occupied Arab territories, Palestine including and the holy city of Jerusalem.

At the same time the government has confessed that it was acquiring arms and ammunition regularly from Israel, its declared number one enemy. The Speaker of Parliament Rafsanjani officially announced recently that Iran was buying arms from Israel to continue the war against Iraq. He could not have lied about it because the flights of Iranian-bred planes loading arms in Israel have been common knowledge for quite some time.

So how can any Arab or Muslim take Iranian declarations seriously? They claim to be intent on liberating the occupied lands from Israeli control. Yet at the same time they have a close liaison with Israel by buying arms from it and helping its tottering economy with massive injections of cash. Israel thus benefits three ways. It obtains hard currency for its weapons, helps a Muslim country fight a Muslim state and weakens the Arab Muslim front against it in the process.

Such links are unjustifiable since a major Islamic state has established direct and open relations with Israel, Islam's leading enemy and the occupying force of its third holiest shrine, in Jerusalem. At the same time, it continues to occupy and rule the remaining part of Palestine and maintains a surrogate enclave in Lebanon and bobs away over the Golan Heights in Syria.

On what grounds can a sincerely Islamic state explain its arms purchases from Israel. Is it the only market for the kind of arms that Iran wants? The world is full of arms peddlers who will be only too glad to sell their wares. They are doing just that to refuel many of the current conflicts including those in Lebanon.

The Iranian leaders should rethink their entire policies, especially the foreign ones. If they want to continue defiling themselves and leading their country down the road to ruin, that is their own misfortune. But they have no basis for claiming an Islamic right to liberate the occupied lands including Jerusalem, and then do business with Israel.

Saudi Arabian press review

Sunday's newspapers commented on the postponement of the 12th Arab heads of state summit for more consultations on the prime Arab issue to gain a unanimous approach for the benefit of the Arab and Palestinian causes.

Al-Jazirah said the postponement of the summit will benefit the Arab nation, since several Arab leaders were not present at the summit. "Moreover, it will also give a chance for renewing contacts among the Arab leaders to determine points of agreement and differences," the paper added.

The paper hoped that the next summit will give a clear-cut vision on all these points through a spirit of Arab solidarity and unity for realizing common goals of destiny. Al-Jazirah called for devising a charter of strategic commitments among the Arab states in order to prevent periodical or tactical commitments.

Al-Riyadh urged the Arab leaders to take appropriate measures for solving their petty differences. It called for initiating decisive actions on issues of common destiny, so as to protect their national respect and confront the challenges imposed on them.

"Putting an end to the disputes among the Arab governments is the urgent national demand and is the only way to overcome the negative aspects of Arab action for cementing Arab solidarity and restoring their usurped lands and dignity," the paper added.

Okaz urged the Arab leaders to honestly reconsider their stand and devote their loyalty to the greater Arab interests. "Arab solidarity now demands as a top priority, a unified joint Arab action on their prime cause, regardless of any partial, regional, ideological and narrow considerations," the paper said.

"Solidarity should emanate from a sound and comprehensive understanding of the call made by King Khaled at the third Islamic heads of state summit conference in Taif, at which he highlighted the necessity of formulating a stand based on Arab and Islamic concept rather than on Eastern or Western outlook," Okaz said.

Okaz said the Saudi Arabian peace plan is basically founded on such a concept of Arab solidarity, pinpointing the Arab and Palestinian demands in the light of the current Arab and international political situation.

Meanwhile, Al-Madinah deplored the false claims and irrational actions by the Iranian rulers and their failure to ensure a minimum degree of security and stability in the country for the people.

The paper noted the confusion in Iran created by the execution of thousands of people and the arrests of many dissidents. "In spite of this, the Iranian rulers claim that they are in control of the country's affairs," the paper said. (SPA)

'Unlikely' Soviet invasion presents Europe with security dilemma

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer, a co-founder of the Institute for Policy Studies, is the author of 'Real Security: Restoring American Power in a Dangerous Decade'.)

By Richard J. Barnett

WASHINGTON — For over 30 years the Western Alliance has been obsessed with combating an unlikely threat with an incredible defense.

At no time since the establishment of NATO have military or intelligence experts rated the prospect of a Soviet military invasion as anything but remote. Originally, the military buildup in Europe was designed to be a "modest shield," as George Kennan put it, behind which recovery could take place. At the hearings on the North Atlantic Treaty held in the spring of 1949 John Foster Dulles, then serving as Senator from New York, summed up the prevailing view: "I do not know of any responsible high official, military or civilian...in this government or any other government who believes that the Soviet now plans conquest by open military aggression."

Today Soviet capabilities to mount an invasion of Europe are no doubt greater than in the past, as former U.S. Secretary of Defense Harold Brown stated in his final posture statement. But, he added, "I doubt that we would have to contend with such an assault as a bolt out of the blue." Even strong advocates of a buildup of U.S. military forces, such as Paul Nitze, rate a Soviet invasion as "unlikely" but worry that the Kremlin could use the theoretical capability of launching such an attack as blackmail. John M. Collins, a self-styled "conservative critic of defense" at the Library of Congress, says "I believe the likelihood that Soviet Union will attack Western Europe...in the short-term or even mid-term future is extremely remote."

So for almost two generations the NATO Alliance has been beset by schizophrenia. The actual military threat against which the allies continue to arm is rare and low, yet military planning conventionally addresses capabilities, not intentions, which after all can change.

The military problem is the theoretical possibility that the Soviet Union with its large standing army could launch hundreds of divisions across the Elbe. The problem has no satisfactory solution, but the whole NATO panoply, including the U.S. divisions, the U.S. "guarantee" and endless public discussions such as Secretary of State Alexander Haig's disclosure of NATO's "nuclear warning shot" strategy, are all designed as an elaborate insurance policy.

The trouble, however, is that the premiums have become much too costly — not only because the monthly payments threaten the economies of the members, but because the payoff looks increasingly dubious. Nuclear "defense" is a sham, since the use of the weapons, with or without neutron warheads, will destroy that which is to be defended. A conventional defense is certainly more rational than a suicidal nuclear defense, but the most conventional defense can do, assuming the Soviets make an all-out attack, is to delay their progress and to establish the political environment for a settlement. Given the nature of modern weapons, a short conventional war — 10 days, six weeks or whatever — would also devastate much of Europe. Why the combatants would be willing then to display the reasonableness that seems to elude them now in a time of peace is not clear.

For the Europeans and the Americans to have a big enough conventional force to raise the "nuclear threshold," the industrial states would have to be prepared for a sacrifice of social spending beyond anything they have yet instituted and to introduce permanent conscription on a massive scale.

While Ronald Reagan is pleased to proceed with the former, he is reluctant to institute the latter — for the very good reason that in the United States conscription amounts to a popular referendum on foreign policy. In Europe, cutting government benefits such as social security and health care benefits that have been offered since Bismarck's time is politically dangerous even for conservative governments. Europe's only sure defense is peace, and that is why there is a huge peace movement on the continent.

The fundamental contradictions in NATO strategy explain why for more than 20 years so many weapons issues — the skybolt missile, the multilateral force, neutron bombs, cruise missiles — have been highly divisive.

There are no good security answers for Europe within the present conceptual framework. The allies have used weapons issues as metaphors, and in the process much of the discussion has the appearance of a charade. When such German leaders as the conservative Christian Democratic Franz Josef Strauss say to the Americans that the alliance must not weaken in its resolve to use nuclear weapons in Germany, it is not that they wish to turn their country into radioactive wasteland. All they mean is that the fiercer the threat, the better the deterrent.

Whether that was ever a prudent defense policy is questionable, but it is manifestly imprudent now that the Soviet has the capacity to match the West's nuclear weapons. When the risk of war by miscalculation was less than it is now, irresponsible statements about nuclear weapons were less dangerous. The rise of an atomic sentiment in Europe reflects a growing sense that with respect to defense strategy, the emperor has no clothes.

There are some fundamental problems with existing theories of strength through deterrence. The deterrence system rests on assumptions about human nature that probably are wrong. For example, that leaders with a finger on the button will act rationally under conditions of ever-increasing threat. Because of creeping technology, a deterrence system based on an elusive "balance" is inherently unstable; every weapons laboratory development, real or imagined, has a potentially destabilizing effect on the relationship.

A security system is likely to be more stable if it is based on positive incentives to keep the peace rather than on threats. But we will be living under a security system based largely on deterrence for a long time to come, if only because the leading nations have invested so heavily in it, and because the smaller nations have aped the great powers in designing their own security arrangements.

But it is essential to build a deterrence system on strength, not weakness. A strategy based on nuclear weapons in which the public quite properly has little confidence divides the society and invites outside pressure. Nor does a society become strong by sacrificing growth, innovation and the soundness of its economy to an endless arms race.

The failure of the United States to manage its economy has shaken confidence in American leadership around the world. If the richest society in the world cannot manage its own affairs, how can it defend others?

The Soviets pose a potential military threat that seems increasingly implausible. If the Kremlin cannot successfully control Eastern Europe with military force or pacify a poor country like Afghanistan, why would they think that they could successfully occupy Western Europe?

But high interest rates in the United States, to take one important example, are threatening European economies now. Part of the premium the Americans and Europeans are paying for the military security system are the adverse economic consequences that affect them both.

If there should develop a genuine fear of a Soviet invasion in Europe, the only workable deterrent would be to create the impression in the minds of Soviet leaders that the invading or occupying troops face the same prospect that has kept them out of Yugoslavia and, so far at least, Poland: The prospect of permanent popular resistance. The stronger the society in real terms — in its ability to manage its economy, to build popular solidarity, to arrange a secure resource base — the more credible such a prospect becomes and the less inviting a target it makes.

Much of the so-called "realism" in Europe is based on a growing conviction that piling up military hardware that cannot be used without destroying the user does not add to national strength.

In the United States, Americans have fallen into the trap of measuring increments of strength in dollars. By diverting scarce resources to the military, successive U.S. administrations seriously weakened the American economy and damaged its educational system and resource base.

When Americans demand the Europeans increase their military expenditures by some arbitrary percentage, typically the call to sacrifice is defended not as a means of delivering a radically different military reality, but as one that will overcome the competitive advantage Europe and Japan have had by virtue of their relatively low military expenditures over the past two decades.

A much greater danger to the West than the unlikely Soviet invasion is an internal political, economic and moral crisis. Such weakness could indeed play into the hands of the Soviet Union.

In a time of slow growth the European democracies are unable to deal with the historic structural problems they face, they run the risk of the same sort of social dissolution that caused the fall of France in 1940, when it boasted the largest army in Europe. A dynamic Europe that is modernizing its institutions, managing its economy and establishing mutually advantageous relations with resource-producing countries, has little to fear from Soviet intimidation. In the test of nerves against which Americans are supposedly arming, economic and political strength are far more important weapons than more hardware.

If a society is not prepared to surrender, then it cannot be intimidated. If it looks strong internally and demonstrates high morale and vitality, it is less likely to be tested.

The whole "blackmail" theory needs a hard look. It is not clear why the Europeans — who have been living 10 minutes away from Soviet city-destroying weapons for 20 years — should suddenly cave because the Soviets have new weapons capable of making the rubble bounce. It is not clear what the Soviets could blackmail the Europe into doing.

Leaving NATO? It is more credible that some European governments will leave NATO because Americans have scared them away than because of a stiff note or nasty phone call from Moscow.

Keeping Solzhenitsyn off television? That's what one distinguished exponent of the Finlandization thesis once argued to me. Is the fate of Europe going to hang on a question like that?

Reducing the industrial states of Europe to economic vassals? West Europe's proposed increased dependence on the Soviet Union for national gas constitutes far more leverage than does the SS-20s. Unless the Soviets are prepared to invade Europe — and reduce to cinders the very assets they would hope to take — then the blackmail threat is not credible, provided the internal economic and social strength of the continent is maintained.

The greatest threat to the capacity of the West to solve its security dilemma is the crippling psychological mood of the moment, based on the growing apprehension that nuclear war is inevitable. In the United States, a recent Gallup Poll showed that 47 percent of the population believes that a nuclear war within 10 years is either "fairly likely" or "very likely" and the overwhelming majority believes that their chances of personal survival in such event are no better than 50-50. In Europe the apprehension of nuclear war is even greater.

A security system in which the people to be protected have so little faith represents a serious vulnerability. The gathering pessimism is a consequence of the breakdown of negotiations and the attempt by the Reagan administration to make the deterrent credible by dramatizing the prospect of actually fighting a limited nuclear war. Because of the inherent insolubility of the military security problem, there is now an increasing danger of a serious split between the U.S. and Europe and a breakup of the alliance at exactly the moment it is most needed.

The security options available to Europe in such a situation are unsatisfactory. In the wake of a collapse of NATO, any accommodation with the Soviet Union would be on distinctly less advantageous terms than could be negotiated as a U.S. ally. A decision to build up European nuclear forces would neither end the arms race nor the growing popular revulsion against nuclear weapons which every Western government must now confront. All it would accomplish would be to insure an even greater Soviet nuclear threat against Europe under circumstances in which the Soviets might well be tempted to exert pressure on European governments.

The outlook and strategy of the Soviet Union can be tested by serious negotiations. It is now clear from eight years of SALT negotiations that agreements must be simpler, more comprehensive, and more quickly negotiated than in the past. A licensed arms race under which some systems are controlled while others leap ahead is not a practical policy.

It would be most welcome if the Kremlin were to accept President Reagan's offer to trade a promise not to deploy the Pershing II and cruise missiles in Europe for the dismantling of all the Soviet intermediate range missiles in Europe. Everyone on both sides would be safer if such a deal could be struck.

If the president wants significant reductions of nuclear weapons of all ranges, then a good starting point would be a freeze on the testing and deployment of all nuclear weapons delivery systems, which would include both strategic and European-theater nuclear weapons. The freeze, which could be for a specified period, say four years, could be verified by national intelligence means. The conventional argument that a freeze would preserve a Soviet advantage in Europe is not persuasive for two reasons.

First, there never has been a "balance" of land-based middle-range weapons, and the U.S. abandoned the efforts to create one 15 years ago when it removed the last of the old-style intermediate-range rockets. If the NATO-assigned Polaris submarines are included, not to mention the French and British nuclear forces, there are enough European-based nuclear weapons to create the near-certainty in the minds of the Soviet leaders that an attack on Europe would result in the devastation of their homeland. The only "balance" of any significance is whether the capacity for retaliation exists on both sides.

Second, a four-year freeze would benefit the West. After all, it is the Soviets who are putting in a new missile every few days, not the U.S. Indeed, it now appears that for technical reasons it may be almost three years before the first U.S. missiles arrive. It may well be that for political reasons they will never arrive. Without a freeze, the Soviets will be further ahead than ever.

Sooner or later the United States, if it is really interested in arms reduction, will have to demonstrate its commitment to Europe by trading some of the cards it holds, such as forward bases, for the elimination of the Soviet nuclear threat against Europe.

Now that, as a result of popular pressure, Reagan has at least opened up the possibility of a "zero option," similar pressure should be put on Moscow to make some unilateral reduction in the SS-20s. Such a gesture could make more likely the moratorium on deployment which is indispensable to a real reversal of the arms race. But the United States will have to come forward with less one-sided proposals than the Reagan offer. Were Americans prepared to act boldly, the alliance might once again serve to unite Europeans and Americans rather than to divide them. (WP)

Regular Radio Riyadh broadcasts are a favorite of many audiences

By Scott Pendleton
Riyadh Bureau

RIYADH — Local contributors fill an essential role in Radio Riyadh's European Services, and more are continually sought to originate material for broadcast and as announcers.

"I'm always glad to interview people who want to participate in broadcasting, provided they have something to contribute," says Norman Perry, an 11-year veteran of Radio Riyadh. "I never turn away anyone who wants to be tested for suitability," he says.

The European Service of Radio Riyadh is broadcast in English from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and from 8 p.m. to midnight, daily on the shortwave frequency of 11.855 kHz. A French language broadcast occurs for the two hours starting at 6 p.m.

Many of the non-medical segments of the broadcast are created in the Kingdom, especially Islamic programs. Some of these include "Islam and the Future," "Islamic Concepts and Challenges," and "On Islam."

Numerous other programs are created in the Kingdom, including such topics as sports, art, drama, news, medicine, and variety. There are quiz programs geared to women and to children's audiences.

Perry, familiar to most of the Kingdom as a news announcer on Saudi Arabian television, notes that the English-language service strives to give as broad a range of programming as possible during the 42 hours per week it is on the air.

"New ideas are very hard to come by," he says. "We'll always listen to a new idea."

Perry holds auditions of the studios here for applicants on Thursday mornings only, due to the busy recording schedule. He seeks those with previous experience for full-time positions, and "looks kindly" on those who seek part-time work who have experience or to whom broadcasting comes naturally.

Many of the part-time staff now working at the station had worked elsewhere in broadcasting. Linda Fairbrother, host of "The Chat Show," worked as a freelance reporter for the BBC in England. Amy Wong, producer of "Food, Health and Home," worked in broadcasting in Taiwan. Liz Bataineh, who creates the weekly children's program as well as "Artists and Their Art," worked for two years at Radio Doha. Arlen Chiri, who puts together the country and western music segments, broadcast for a year with Radio Sri Lanka.

With applicants of such diverse backgrounds as can be found in Saudi Arabia, a firm command of English becomes another important criterion, Perry says.

Not all who wish to contribute to Radio Riyadh programming need to speak on the air. Perry points out that the station has begun supplementing its output of drama, usually such classics as the works of Thomas Hardy, Jane Austen or Charles Dickens, by material written locally.

Already the station has recorded half-hour plays by Riyadh authors using as a cast people with experience in local theater groups. With the broadcast of the first play, the station will solicit more manuscripts.

There are still other ways for the community to become involved with Radio Riyadh. Liz Bataineh likes to have children of ages four to 14 in the studio when recording the children's program. Though recording usually occurs during school hours, teachers who want their class to be on the radio can call the studio to arrange a different recording time.

Of course, the Radio Riyadh English Service also has requests and dedications for pop songs on its "Call the Tune" program. Hosted by Leila Turjoman, the highly-popular program is aired for 45 minutes twice a week. Turjoman, a Saudi who speaks fluent English due to being raised in the United States, has been with the station since 1971 and is "one of the mainstays," says Perry.

Radio Riyadh's European Service is "most definitely different" than that of Radio Jeddah, Perry says. But the two often swap programs. Jeddah Radio, being nearer to the Islamic Universities in Makkah and Medinah, is able to find far more contributors for Islamic programming, while Radio Riyadh has more access to popular music.

The full news broadcasts, carried simultaneously on Jeddah and Riyadh Radio. Similarly, the two stations carried an English-language commentary by Riyadh's David Dixon during the telecast of the Saudi-Kuwait soccer match. And during the telecast of the England-Hungary match, the English commentary was split off and carried by radio. An Arabic commentary, by former BBC Arabic Service Sports commentator Akram Saleh, was substituted for television viewers.

In the future, Riyadh Radio will expand to carry full individual programs in the English, German, Spanish and French languages, Perry believes. The signals will also be broadcast by powerful shortwave transmitters to be heard worldwide. Perry notes that Radio Jeddah is already received on short wave by listeners around the world.

Radio relay by satellite helps animals

By a Science Correspondent

LONDON — Conservationists and wildlife enthusiasts will be pleased with a new technique that uses a satellite to track and protect endangered species. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in Washington, D.C., is using transmitters attached to sea turtles to identify feeding, nesting and mating areas. Information on the location of the turtle, beamed from the transmitter to a satellite, will help in managing and protecting the species.

The satellite has great advantages over a person in tracking the animal. It operates 24 hours per day, follows the turtle wherever it may go — into a swamp, under logs, through mud, and does not upset the animal's natural migratory habits.

A repertory ensemble such as the one Otis, Kelso and Collette are now assembling could serve several purposes. As Otis points out, it can span a period from the early 1920s, when Fletcher Henderson had the first significant "big" jazz orchestra (10 musicians was considered sizeable in those days), up to the mid-1940s, when small-combo bebop was in flower and very few new bands were being organized.

The average listener is unlikely to be familiar with the contributions of Jimmie Lunceford (some contemporaries believed he had the greatest orchestra of them all), Andy Kirk, Jay McShann, Erskine Hawkins, the west coast bands of Les Hite and Harlan Leonard and others from a period now preserved only in a somewhat limited library of lps.

Buddy Collette shares his colleagues' enthusiasm. "Seven years ago I was teaching at California State University in Los Angeles, and there was so much to explain to the student musicians; not only historical facts, but technical things like differences of vibrato. Those young guys got a whole lot from that program. By the same token, if we make this a semi-educational undertaking, we can ask people like, say, Marshall Royal, who played lead saxophone with Basie for 20 years, to explain just how he helped to give that band its special sound."

"Our band will start out with black musicians because we want people who have that heritage, but I wouldn't go along with it if we couldn't eventually feel free to draw on anyone who can interpret the music, the way some of those students have learned to since I worked with them at Cal State."

Otis pointed out that the ensemble can and should reflect the whole artistic essence of the historical period it represents. "We might have a gospel group for a guest appearance, to reflect that aspect of the heritage. We might want to use a Roy Milton, or reintroduce someone like Nellie Lutcher."

The black heritage ensemble also could provide a needed service by drawing attention to some of the gifted composer-arrangers whose names are all but forgotten.

RADIO RIYADH LISTENER: Broadcasts from Radio Riyadh are interesting not only to the residents of Saudi Arabia, but to radio enthusiasts in many foreign countries who listen to the regular programs to learn more about the Kingdom.

Jazz revival is planned

Famous musicians join in an effort to immortalize traditional sounds

By Leonard Feather

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — It has often been said that jazz, and the legacy of its greatest creative artists has had the good fortune of being passed along from one generation to the next through the medium of phonograph records. The definitive improvisations of early masters, even the subtle nuances of compositions and arrangements that have been imperfectly documented on paper, would be lost — but thanks to the constant reissuing of works that go back more than 60 years, we still have our aural history books.

Is this enough? If not, can a viable reconstruction be devised, one through which the young music student in the 1980s can be exposed to a reasonably authentic sight-and-sound version of developments that took place decades before he was born?

Recently a group of musicians here, meeting to discuss common interests, came up with an idea, one that is not without precedent but has never yet been realized on a continuous basis. The triumvirate mainly responsible for the decision are of saxophonists William "Buddy" Collette and Jackie Kelso, and the former bandleader Jonny Otis, who in recent years has not been active in music.

"We sat around reminiscing," Otis said, "and it occurred to us that in our age bracket — late 50s, early 60s — we are the last wave of the guys who had a foot in that great era of the big bands. We got a taste of that honey, Jackie played in Lionel Hampton's band in the '40s, Buddy was in any number of bands all the way back to 1939, and I had my own band starting in the mid-'40s. But suddenly it all came to a crunching halt, and despite all the talk you hear nowadays about the return of the big bands, the time they represented will not come back."

"We reflected on the European tradition, which left so much great music that is still being played by orchestras all over the world. But we have our own classics too, and the nature of Afro-American classical music — that feels better to me than using the word jazz — is the ad lib solo element, which is lost except for the relatively small number of records."

"Suddenly it dawned on us — why not put together a black heritage ensemble, to convey this cultural tradition, live before audiences in concert halls, on television, at festivals?"

The concept was tried in the mid-1970s

Heritage list will catalog world wonders

By Judy Yablonsky

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — When the ancient Greeks cataloged the wonders of the world, they listed seven — of the seven, only the pyramids of Egypt survive. The pyramids now are on a long — and growing — list of natural and manmade wonders, the world Heritage List compiled under the auspices of UNESCO, the U.N. Scientific, Educational and Scientific Organization.

The world Heritage List, which includes 112 sites and monuments in more than 33 countries, was established by the world heritage convention of 1972.

Signatories are invited to nominate sites or works of "outstanding universal value." These may include nature or wildlife preserves, geological formations, archaeological finds, buildings or monumental works of art and sculpture.

The great Barrier Reef in Australia, the head-smashed-in Bison Jump in Canada, West Germany's cathedral, France's Fontainebleau Chateau, the ruins of Quirigua in Guatemala, the Medina in Fez, Morocco, and the ruins of Kilwa Kisiwani and of Songu Nsara in Tanzania are among 26 sites added to the list last month.

Sixty-one countries have signed the international agreement to cooperate in preserving significant natural and historic sites. Among the nations which have not signed the convention are Great Britain, the Soviet Union and China.

Participating governments are entitled to apply for technical and financial help from the committee.

Despite failure*Exiled group warns of Seychelles coup

LONDON, Nov. 29 (AP) — Another attempt will be made to oust the Socialist government of the Seychelles despite last week's unsuccessful attack on the islands by a force of foreign mercenaries, a spokesman for the organization reportedly behind the operation was quoted as saying Sunday.

British newspapers quoted Paul Chow, London spokesman for the Movement Pour la Resistance, as saying his group would try again to dislodge the regime of President Albert Rene and "restore democracy" in the Seychelles. He did not say when the fresh coup attempt would take place.

Chow was quoted as saying the strike Wednesday by a multinational force of mercenaries was organized by a group of wealthy Seychelles exiles.

The coup was foiled when the infiltrators' weapons were discovered and some of them fled to South Africa in a hijacked plane after a gun battle with Seychelles troops. Chow said the group had "no association whatsoever" with the government of South Africa, where the mercenaries were reportedly recruited. Two years ago, Rene accused South Africa of trying to topple him.

"Our movement is made up of Seychellois, the majority of the people on the island who have been forced into exile by the oppressive regime of Albert Rene," Chow said in a statement.

Chow said the movement had members in Britain, South Africa and the United States, charging Rene's government has been responsible for a wave of repression and brutality. But there were no links with any government, he said.

Chow also denied that former Seychelles President James Mancham was involved in the coup although he was the movement's first choice for leader. Mancham, deposed in 1977 when Rene took over and now living in London, confirmed last week that he had been approached to back the coup but declined to become involved.

Zimbabwe's biggest-selling newspaper, The Sunday Mail, meanwhile charged white-ruled South Africa with seeking to establish a Bantustan puppet state through the abortive mercenary-backed coup on the Seychelles islands.

The newspaper, in an editorial, said the use of white mercenaries "is a new form of colonialism designed to install and maintain puppet governments in Africa."

The mercenaries sought "to remove the true leaders of Africa and replace them with black lackeys and lick-spittles," the pro-government paper commented. The Mail called on black African states to "pool their resources with a view to exterminating the despicable vermin, mercenaries, from Africa."

Former U.K. diplomat admits ties with spies

LONDON, Nov. 29 (R) — The Sunday Times said that a retired British diplomat had acknowledged having links with East European intelligence officers in the late 1950s but said he gave no secrets away. The newspaper quoted Edward Scott as saying he was trapped into his East European contacts through an affair with a Czechoslovak housemaid at the British security men until 1969, eight years after he left the diplomatic service. The Sunday Times said, and was never prosecuted although he had expected he would be.

In interviews with the newspaper, Scott said he was only technically a spy. He gave no secrets away and in fact had strung his contacts along, leading them to believe he would eventually be a useful spy.

The case is the latest in a series involving security which have caused a row in Britain. The Sunday Times revealed this month that Leo Long, a retired film company executive, had confessed he spied for the Soviet Union while working in British intelligence during World War II.

Long was part of a spy ring operated by Anthony Blunt, later an art adviser to Queen Elizabeth, who confessed to the British intelligence services in 1964.

Neither Long nor Blunt was prosecuted. The Sunday Times said Scott told of meetings with Czechoslovak officers at which the weather and Anglo-Czechoslovak relations were discussed.

In 1958, Scott asked for an exit visa for the housemaid and she joined him in Vienna where he used his influence to get her refugee status. The Sunday Times said.

After he returned to London in December, 1958, he saw a Czechoslovak officer a few times but told The Sunday Times that they only chatted innocently.

Six shot to death in Miami

MIAMI, Florida, Nov. 29 (AP) — Police found six persons shot to death, apparently with automatic weapons, Saturday night in a fashionable suburban home, they said.

An anonymous caller told Dade County police that the persons, including a baby, were dead at the house in the King's Court subdivision in southwestern Dade County, spokesman Dave Graveline said.

Officers found six bodies there shortly after that call, Graveline said. Graveline would not comment on the report that a baby was among the dead.

"We discovered the bodies of six Latins," he said. "We're not identifying the six or ages as yet. No drugs have been found on the scene. They apparently died earlier in the day."

According to the police spokesman, automatic weapons were found strewn around the ranch-style home.

Fight against Salvador junta advancing, front leaders say

SAN VICENTE PROVINCE, El Salvador, Nov. 29 — Underground leaders of the Democratic Revolutionary Front, meeting in a well-fortified guerrilla camp, say their fight to overthrow the Salvadoran government is advancing "uncontainably."

They spoke to foreign correspondents at a ceremony marking the anniversary of the assassinations of six front leaders who were found dead after being kidnapped last year during a news conference in San Salvador, the capital.

Responsibility for the deaths of the six, who included Enrique Alvarez Cordova, president of the front, was claimed by a paramilitary organization, the Maximiliano Hernandez Brigade, named for a general who violently crushed a 1932 peasant uprising.

The front is a coalition that represents five Marxist guerrilla groups and non-violent leftist foes of El Salvador's United States-backed ruling junta.

At the ceremony Thursday, somewhere in San Vicente Province, the rebels denied government claims that its troops had complete control of this country of 4.8 million people. Eduardo Calles, vice president of the front, rejected the battlefield death tolls issued by the army officials as exaggerated. "They are really carrying out the war on paper," he said.

Others at the ceremony were Saul Valente, Maria Gladis Toledo, Raul Vivero, Manuel Quintanilla and Arturo Gonzalez, identified as members of the front's executive committee. It had been generally believed that at least some of them had gone into exile. Also present were several unidentified guerrillas in charge of rebel operations in this central region of the country.

In remarks to reporters, Calles also denied that Salvadoran rebels are dependent on the Soviet Union, Cuba and Nicaragua for inspiration, training and arms. "They are venting falsehoods," he said of U.S. and Salvadoran government claims.

The front's fight, Calles said, is the result of El Salvador's poverty and its past governments. "Its origin is so many years of injustice, some years of misery," he said.

Asked whether the front planned to take steps to disrupt or halt elections for a constituent assembly that the junta has scheduled for March, Calles replied only that "the people" would reject them for themselves.

Small party holds balance

Muldoon to stay despite rebuff

WELLINGTON, Nov. 29 (Agencies) — Prime Minister Robert Muldoon insists that he has a mandate to stay in office despite a rebuff from New Zealand's voters in a general election that reflected disillusionment with the major parties.

The 1.8 million voters Saturday failed to give an overall majority to any party, producing the first hung parliament in more than 60 years and giving the balance of power to the small Social Credit League.

Muldoon's conservative National Party had its seats cut from 50 to 46. The opposition Labor Party, which needed a swing of only one percent to take power, managed only a net gain of four seats and now has 44.

Social Credit retained its two seats.

An extended period of political instability and uncertainty seemed inevitable, and commentators predicted a new election within a year or 18 months. The closest election result in New Zealand's modern history topped off a traumatic year during which a South African rugby tour provoked unprecedented divisions throughout the country.

Despite the apparent political deadlock, Muldoon argued strongly that he had a mandate to continue in power. He ruled out any accommodation with Social Credit, saying "we're still the government. Nobody's going to talk to anybody."

Constitutional experts said the government would in fact be in a minority in full parliamentary sessions because its speaker did not have a deliberative vote. Muldoon, however, said he was taking Social Credit at its word that it would not go against the government in money supply bills or a vote of confidence.

He announced that he did not intend to call parliament together until next May as scheduled, but Labor Party leader Bill Rowling said Muldoon must convene it earlier to obtain a mandate to govern. The prime minister said he would press ahead with major foreign-financed energy projects although these are opposed by Social Credit.

The already unstable situation could become even more uncertain in the next few days. Three seats were held with majorities of less than 100 and the results in these areas could be overturned after the counting of absentee votes, which officials said could take nine days or more.

The National Party won two seats by razor-thin majorities of 16 and 44. Votes by New Zealanders overseas could give these seats to the Labor Party, and thus give the two parties the same number of seats, observers said. In turn, Labor won one seat by only 96 votes.

Muldoon said his cabinet would meet Monday and he would expect to name a new team within two weeks. One cabinet member, Works Minister Bill Young, and two undersecretaries were among five government members of parliament to lose their seats.

Typhoon toll climbs to 273

MANILA, Nov. 29 (AP) — The death toll in the wake of Typhoon Irma which struck the Philippines Tuesday has risen to 273 persons, with 153 more injured and 43 missing, the social Welfare Ministry said Sunday.

Marina Tabamo, the ministry's social welfare project supervisor, said the typhoon's 128-mile-per-hour (220 kph) peak winds destroyed or damaged 119,233 houses.

Mrs. Tabamo said reports on the extent of the typhoon's destruction were still incomplete because remote villages isolated by a communication breakdown had not been heard from.

Authorities said the hardest-hit area was the coastal province of Camarines Sur where several towns were hit by giant waves that killed more than 200 villagers.

Spain seizes toxic oil

MADRID, Nov. 29 (AFP) — The civil guard in western Spain has seized a new load of toxic oil and arrested two vendors allegedly preparing to ship it to Madrid, reliable sources said here Sunday.

They said that guardsmen confiscated more than two tons of the oil produced by the Raela outside Madrid, a main source of the contaminated oil that has left some 200 persons dead and thousands of others sick since May.

The shipment, contained in five-liter bottles without labels, was confiscated in the town of Logroño in the province of Cáceres, the sources said.

Social science group urged for Islamizing disciplines

KUALA LUMPUR, Nov. 29 (AFP) — A professor of Islamic studies Sunday suggested the formation of an association of social scientists committed to Islam as a first step toward introducing Islamic social science curriculum in Muslim universities.

To introduce this curriculum, the problem of a shortage of staff in Muslim universities around the world must be solved, said professor Ismail Al-Faruqi of Temple University, Philadelphia.

In a working paper presented at the international seminar on Islam and social science here, Ismail said the undeniable and most crying need of Islamic education was for human resources.

Though there were hundreds of thousands of postgraduate degree-holders, few among them were even aware of the problem of Islamizing the disciplines, he added. Many of them were so completely brainwashed by the West that they had become committed enemies of Islamization.

Ismail said one of the main functions of the association should be to spread and intensify awareness of the gravity of the problem in Islamizing social science curriculum.

Pakistan policy tilts toward private sector

ISLAMABAD, Nov. 29 (AP) — President Gen. Muhammad Zia ul-Haq made clear Saturday that private enterprise would officially be encouraged and that state-owned firms would no longer present unfair competition.

"Pakistan will continue to follow policies of Islam which project free enterprise and free competition for all those who are capable of doing something," he told an international conference on public sector economics. "It is in this context that we are developing our

EEC to bolster ties with India

BRUSSELS, Nov. 29 (AFP) — The European Economic Community intends to set up a permanent mission in New Delhi, officials here confirmed Sunday. The purpose will be to strengthen economic and trade relations between EEC and India. Meanwhile, a regional economic grouping comprising Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru and Venezuela, has reiterated its desire to establish cooperative relations with the EEC mission led by Jose de la Puente, coordinator of the pact's units arrived in here for what the EEC described as "technical" contacts.

Alfa to cut output

ROME, Nov. 29 (AFP) — Italy's second biggest auto manufacturer, Alfa Romeo, has said it will cut production from 270,000 vehicles by about 100,000 units next year.

Commenting on the firm's decision, the economic daily Il Sole 24 Ore has forecast that this will mean layoff for 14,000 workers during the whole of next year.

economy."

The debate as to whether Pakistan should have a totally private or public sector economy has come to an end, Zia declared. Henceforth, Pakistan's public sector would no longer hinder private sector development, but would rather supplement it.

It was the clearest policy statement the leader has made since seizing power in 1977 from the late Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto.

Bhutto followed a policy enlarging the public sector. In 1972, he nationalized 32 industrial units as well as Pakistan-owned banks, life insurance companies, edible oil firms and shipping lines. Private investment declined steeply as a result and economists say there was considerable flight of capital abroad.

Political unrest during his last months in power and the uncertainty that followed the July 1977 coup swept away much of the investment interest that remained.

Zia has launched a campaign to denationalize some ailing public enterprises in an attempt to encourage both foreign and domestic businessmen.

In his speech, Zia acknowledged private enterprises "did not have confidence in government policies." A recent American investment mission reacted favorably when he told it that his regime would "patronize" the private sector and that the "country would continue to have political stability."

The Pakistani leader criticized the way nationalized banks have been operating and disclosed profitability problems existed in some public enterprises. He cited the annual $6 million deficit incurred by Public Transport Corporations in Karachi, Lahore and Rawalpindi.

U.S. move augurs ill for EEC steel

LONDON, Nov. 29 (R) — With much of the world's steel industry struggling to ride out recession, the Reagan administration is crossing swords with foreign producers to safeguard its home market for American companies.

Charges of unfair trade practices launched by Washington threaten the recovery prospects of the subsidized West European industry, beset by recession and surplus capacity, according to industry analysts.

They say the U.S. action also poses the risk of a worldwide price war as steel mills in rapidly developing countries such as South Korea and Brazil fight to maintain production in a dismal world market.

Brussels, where policy for Common Market steel is set, was alarmed by the news that Washington was backing domestic steel producers' complaints of unfair pricing by foreigners.

The EEC has labeled as dangerous to free trade the decision by the Reagan administration to claim formally that France, Belgium, Brazil, Romania, and South Africa were selling their products below the cost of production, hurting American steel companies.

Common Market producers have taken advantage of a strong dollar to increase sales to U.S. buyers, despite two rounds of price increases agreed by the market this year. A higher-valued dollar has reduced the cost of imported steel for U.S. customers and Common Market exports have jumped 21.4 percent in the first six months of 1981 to 2.4 million tons.

For the Europeans, this was the first opportunity to boost exports in a long while. Exports dropped steeply by 20 percent in 1980 to 3.9 million tons, only half the level two years earlier.

Just before the Reagan administration set its course to challenge the foreign producers, the European Economic Community (EEC) decided after much internal debate that prices next year should rise 12.5 percent to aid its hard-pressed steel firms, which have had to lay off some 200,000 workers.

Failures on farm front worry

VIENNA, Nov. 29 (AP) — The Soviet Union's confession of crop problems this week reflects widespread farm failures in Eastern Europe.

Government targets for wheat, corn or other grains failed to be reached in nearly every Soviet bloc nation this year, leading to open displays of official concern and frank criticism of agricultural practices.

Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev this week acknowledged another poor harvest, and criticized Soviet economic planners for continued "hitches" and failed economic reforms.

One result of the poor harvests has been more emphasis on small private farms in some Soviet bloc nations.

Czechoslovakia, departing from past practice, has told private farmers they can sell their produce openly, and do not have to pay taxes on their earnings. Romania, already rationing bread, has urged citizens to plant gardens wherever they can.

"Ideology aside, private plots have always been more productive," said one Western diplomat. "There's likely to be a gradual relaxation of the rules regulating them." Unfavorable weather and other factors has often brought poor harvest for the Soviets and their allies. But officials this year seem conscious that Poland's unrest began with food shortages.

"Harvests have been bad before," says Wilhelm Kosek, an analyst at the U.S. Embassy here. "But with Poland staring at everyone, they've caused greater worry this year." The concern is demonstrated by the added attention given to agriculture in the region's state-controlled press in recent months.

In Romania, president and party chief Nicolae Ceausescu has been prominently shown in the press touring agricultural areas and warning of lax work habits on state and cooperative farms.

In September, Ceausescu called for a change of attitude toward farming, which he indicated was being looked down upon in Romania. He said even high-level agricultural officials should be made to work on farms.

Czechoslovakia's official press, in what diplomats in Prague termed unusually frank reports, has complained in recent weeks of grain harvests falling far short of the 11 million ton target and inefficient farming practices.

Poland casts a shadow

The Czech Communist Party says it plans increases in prices paid to farmers for beef, milk and potatoes and will pressure local administrators to offer would-be private farmers small plots of unused land.

Speaking before a Czech central committee meeting in October, Committee Secretary Vasil Bilak said farmers should be made aware that shortages in food production could lead to a greater foreign debt. "This is tellingly shown by the deterring example of Poland," he said, where foreign debt is "an important cause of the emergence of the counter-revolutionary situation."

Soviet bloc

Bulgarian news media have called for increased grain and livestock production to insure adequate supplies next year, and the government imposed a 300 percent surcharge on the export of foodstuffs.

Congress OK for Arabsat ruled out

By Scott Pendleton

RIYADH Nov. 29 — The U.S. House of Representatives will not approve the sale of technology to Arabsat because its members include South Yemen, Libya, and the Palestine Liberation Organization, a congressional aide told Arab News here Sunday.

R. Roger Majak, staff director of the House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on International Trade and Commerce, said the subcommittee had a resolution of disapproval ready when the administration withdrew the proposal.

The proposal would allow Ford Aerospace, a division of the U.S. auto manufacturing giant, to provide technology to the French firm Aerospatiale which would be used by Arabsat.

Because the type of equipment in question is on the International Technology and Arms (ITAR) list and is worth more than $7 million, Congress must approve the sale.

The administration hasn't indicated if or when it will resubmit the sale for congressional approval, Majak said. But when that occurs, he said, "I think there will be substantial questions in our committee." He noted that the administration had never consulted Congress about the sale.

The Trade and Commerce Subcommittee is responsible for such items as the aid program, arms sales, export controls, tariffs, anti-boycott legislation and foreign corrupt practices legislation.

The main question, Majak said, will be: "Could they make any kind of use of it in a war or terrorism situation?" The fact that similar technology is available from other countries doesn't matter to Congress, he added.

American diplomatic sources in Riyadh noted that the sale has been in progress for several years. The Carter administration viewed it as a good way to demonstrate that the Arab countries are prepared to place their self-interest above the boycott of Israel.

Belgian jobless fund runs out

BRUSSELS Nov. 29 (AFP) — The Belgian unemployment kitty has run out of money, said acting Employment Minister Roger De Wulf. Belgium has a 12.5 percent jobless rate, according to the EEC, although the Belgian economy ministry puts it at 10 percent.

As recession deepens U.S. labor faces pay freeze

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AFP) — Lower pay rises — and a pay freeze or pay cut in some cases — are expected in the United States next year, administration and economic circles are commenting here.

The business study body, the Conference Board, has forecast that the average rise in pay, which was 9.5 percent in 1980 and 11.5 percent in 1981, is likely to be only 8.8 percent next year.

Several major pay contracts are up for renewal next year, and already it looks as though employers will take a particularly tough line. Unions are not in strong negotiating position against a background of recession, 10 million unemployed and company financial difficulties.

They also have to contend with a tough Republican administration which was elected to office with the help of votes from large numbers of ordinary working people.

The administration is trying to withdraw from economic, social and financial involvement in industry, and one of its first measures was to dismantle the prices and pay council created to moderate pay rises on a voluntary basis.

The unions must also take account of the fact that workers such as employees of the troubled Chrysler auto giant have had to accept pay cuts to ensure company survival.

The overall sacrifice by Chrysler employees last year is estimated at more than $600 million. In return, they won some interest in profits, should Chrysler make any in the next few years.

More recently, employees of six of the

Capitalist rumblings gather pace in Russia

MOSCOW, Nov. 29 (AFP) — The possibility that Soviet ideologists are about to approve private initiative and reintroduce elements of capitalism have been raised by an article in the official review Socialism in Theory and Practice.

The article was a plea on behalf of agriculture, small businesses and private commerce.

By means of a study of Lenin's 1921 new economic policy (NEP), which reintroduced the private sector to the Soviet Union, the review praised the positive aspects of capitalist enterprises of limited size, provided that they work in the same direction as general state policy.

The review recalled that the NEP resulted in a marked improvement of supplies to towns in 1923 and to rapid recovery of agricultural production.

The supply of food to towns has become a problem once again, and the review suggested that private enterprise in agriculture is not sacrifice so long as "the land remains the property of the state, because this is a legal and political obstacle to the development of capitalism".

The article appeared as a major re-examination of the socialist economy in the Soviet Union is taking place because the system is in serious difficulties.

The review suggested that it is possible to "combine private interest and its control by the state to subordinate private interests to the general interest", particularly through co-operatives.

The NEP was marked by great success in commerce, the review said, adding that "thanks to the legislation of private commerce, tens of thousands of shops, boutiques, cafes and restaurants appeared".

Explaining this vitality, the review said that "traders prospered because of their experience, because they were astute, and because they had a spirit of initiative".

In 1923 more than 80 percent of retail trade turnover was carried out by private shops, and "the state was unable to compete with them", the review admitted. The writer also recalled that a legal capitalist sector then appeared among small industries. Praising this development, the review said "it solved the shortage of goods".

The writer was apparently expressing a train of thought which is gathering momentum in the Soviet Union, arguing that legalization of a limited capitalist sector did not threaten the regime because "the state had assured control of the private sector".

Libya, Angola sign farm pact

LISBON, Nov. 29 (R) — Libya and Angola have signed two agreements providing for bilateral cooperation in agriculture and fishing, the Angolan News Agency Angop said today.

The agreements signed in Luanda Friday after a week of talks between Libyan Planning Minister Moussa Ahmad Abu-Furayah and Angolan Finance Minister Ismael Martins, Angop added.

The two ministers also discussed the possibility of signing future bilateral agreements in the fields of oil, heavy industry, mining and culture, Angop said.

The Libyan planning minister was visiting Angola in the context of efforts to strengthen links of friendship and cooperation between the two countries, Angop said.

OPEC debate on pricing set Dec. 8

BAHRAIN, Nov. 29 (R) — Six OPEC oil ministers will discuss proposals for a flexible oil pricing formula at a special meeting Dec. 8 in the United Arab Emirates, a senior OPEC source in the Gulf said Sunday.

The six, all members of OPEC's long-term strategy committee, will meet the day before a full 13-nation OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) conference in Abu Dhabi.

OPEC's President, Indonesian Oil Minister Dr. Subroto, said last week in Vienna that OPEC was considering proposals for a new long-term pricing formula, flexible enough to allow real prices to remain stable or even decline in a soft market.

He added that the strategy probably would not be approved at the full Abu Dhabi meeting but might be completed before a current OPEC price freeze expired at the end of next year.

An original pricing formula included in OPEC's draft long-term strategy for the 1980s would have raised the real price of oil by an estimated two to three percent a year regardless of the state of the market.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Ahmed Zaki Yamani last week chaired a meeting of long-term strategy committee experts in Vienna, but he was the only minister taking part. The committee consists of Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Algeria, Iran, Iraq and Venezuela.

China to amend foreign trade law

PEKING, Nov. 29 (R) — New tax and contract laws with far-reaching implications for China's foreign trade are due to be passed at this year's session of the country's parliament, the National People's Congress (NPC), starting here Monday.

The NPC will be heavily on the economy during the session, expected to last at least 10 days and include a comprehensive economic report by Premier Zhao Ziyang.

Foreign business interests, particularly in the United States, are likely to focus on a new law on taxing foreign companies that is due to be passed.

U.S. oil companies considering bidding for rights to exploit Chinese offshore oil resources are worried that the taxes they would pay in China might not be credited against their tax liabilities at home.

Western tax experts here said that an initial draft of the Chinese tax law contained separate provisions for taxing foreign oil companies, and these would not have been acceptable for the deduction purposes in the review said the NEP experiment was abandoned despite its results because of misgivings by some members of the Communist Party. "This was explained because they wanted to go to the end of the road, it was because of the 'political intransigence' the review wrote.

Observers have read this analysis in the light of recent statements by President Leonid Brezhnev condemning economic mistakes and calling for initiative and toughness.

Economic questions are not at the center of ideological debate here and some questioning of fundamental principles is being heard, even though it is slow and discreet. The president's criticism singled out the planning mechanism which was the basis of the all-out socialism which followed the NEP.

There is no expectation of spectacular and fundamental re-orientation, but Soviet experts are looking for a new type of economic development and management which would be more dynamic and modern. The state has already said that it would encourage private agriculture with a return to individual allotments for co-operative farmers. It seems clear that the debate is just beginning.

Riyal deposit rates stay firm

J.H. Hammond

JEDDAH, Nov. 29 — With the European markets closed Sunday, local dealers left early by noon complaining of lack of business. Riyal interest rates were mostly dealt in the short periods — under three months, with the majority of transactions under the one-month tenor. Riyal rates held stable in general, but there were mixed opinions in the market as to how riyal deposit rates would open Monday when the European markets re-opened.

Short-term riyal deposits held steady on Sunday, reversing slightly the abrupt falls seen on Saturday. Week fixed deposits were quoted at 4-5 percent back to last week's levels while on Saturday there had been virtually no bidders in this tenor. The one-month JIBOR bid-offer rate was quoted at 6½-7 percent compared with Saturday's 6-6½ percent levels, while one-year riyal was quoted for informational purposes only at 11-12½ percent. On Saturday the year-fixed deposit had been quoted at 11-12 percent.

Dealers pointed out, however, that trading was generally thin and quotes were "wide", indicating a continuing nervousness on where exactly riyal rates were now heading. As in the case of their European counterparts, local dealers were caught in the middle of the sudden drop in the value of the American currency in the New York markets Friday closing. The most pessimistic expectations had been for a slightly stable dollar given the lack of money supply figures from America. As it was, Eurodollar deposit rates continued to move erratically, thus affecting local rates.

On the local exchange markets, spot riyal/dollar rates were quoted widely with hardly any interest shown for the buying of the American currency. Jeddah operators said the rate opened at 3.41 80-90 levels, but by midday Sunday it had reached 3.41 60-90 levels indicating a lack of dealing interest. Normally, the narrower the "quoting range" the more active is the market and the more professional is the dealer. In the Saudi Arabian market, however, wide quotes are common and this is not a reflection on the dealing abilities of the local bankers but simply due to a lack of depth in the market.

China to amend foreign trade law

United States. But a new draft applies to all foreign firms, in which case oil companies "probably would be able to deduct at least part of the taxes they paid here from their U.S. liabilities, they said.

The tax law is an urgent priority for China because it has said it will be ready to call for bids for oil development rights by the end of this year or early next. At least half of the foreign oil companies likely to be interested making bids are American.

The experts said the tax rates are likely to range from 20 to 40 percent on a sliding scale, plus a 10 percent surcharge on the tax paid and possibly a withholding tax of 10 percent on income remitted from China.

The foreign enterprises income tax law as it is called, follows the introduction last year of tax regulation covering joint venture companies and individuals China belatedly fills the yawning gaps in its commercial law.

Czechs snatch point off Soviets to qualify

BRATISLAVA, Czechoslovakia, Nov. 29 (AP) — Czechoslovakia drew 1-1 with the Soviet Union in a Group Three World Cup qualifying match here Sunday to qualify for the finals in Spain next year. The Soviet Union had already qualified.

The draw here means that Wales are now out of the World Cup. The Welsh needed the Czechs to lose here to qualify for the finals. Blokline scored for the Soviet Union in the 14th minute and Vojacek equalized for Czechoslovakia in the 33rd minute.

Meanwhile, Yugoslavia, already assured of a place in the World Soccer Cup finals, ended their qualifying Group Five campaign with 13 points out of a possible 16 when they defeated Greece 2-1 in Athens Sunday.

But they had to come back from a goal down after five minutes to prevail over the Greeks, who were aiming for their first victory against Yugoslavia for more than 50 years.

Greece ended their qualifying matches with seven points and fourth place in the five-nation group, from which Italy qualified along with Yugoslavia for the finals.

The 12,000 crowd in the Karaiskakis Stadium raised a great cheer when Greece took their early lead through Mavros, from a free-kick. But the Yugoslavs equalized in the 22nd minute when Surjace scored from a cross by Zlatko Vujovic, with Greek goalkeeper Pandelis's desperate dive failing to keep the ball out.

Yugoslavia took the lead after 39 minutes when Jerkovic beat Pandelis. The Greeks were not subdued, and they had several opportunities of leveling the scores in the second half but could not clinch them.

World Squash final

Jahangir topples Hunt

TORONTO, Nov. 29 (R) — Seventeen-year-old prodigy Jahangir Khan of Pakistan ended Australian Geoff Hunt's reign as king of squash when he beat him 7-9, 9-1, 9-2, 9-2 in the final of the World Championship Saturday night.

Hunt, 34, has claimed the title all four times since its inception in 1975, but he finally succumbed to his young adversary in a one hour 50 minutes clash.

London-based Jahangir, who underlined his rapid rise to the top by taking Hunt to four games in the British open final seven months ago, showed he now has the strength to match his astonishing natural ability.

Hunt, winner of the Open a record eight times — six of them in successive years — uncharacteristically argued with the referee on his way to winning the opening game. He also gave away two points cheaply at the end of the second and third games before fighting hard throughout the fourth.

The Melbourne player finally emerged from the match a gallant loser and was quick to pay tribute to a youngster who could now dominate squash well into the next decade. "He plays hard, does not complain and he's probably the greatest player I have ever met," said Hunt.

Olga leads Russian sweep

MOSCOW, Nov. 29 (R) — Tiny newcomer Olga Bicherova beat off challenges from her experienced Soviet teammates and took the women's all-round title at the World Gymnastics Championships Saturday night.

In a competition dominated by the Russian trio, the Moscow schoolgirl displayed coolness and technique far beyond her 15 years.

Olympic champion Yelena Davydova's chances of claiming the gold medal effectively vanished in her first exercise of the evening session when she fell while dismounting from the beam. She was awarded 9.35 points and eventually settled for a comfortable third place.

With Davydova out of contention a close battle developed between Bicherova and 20-year-old compatriot Maria Filatova. Both girls turned in consistently high scores with cautious but well-executed exercises.

While Bicherova maintained her lead the outcome was not decided until the closing moments when she scored a maximum 10 points on the vault. It was her first 10 point score in top competition and brought a standing ovation from the packed crowd.

The overseas entry were never in contention although 18-year-old Chinese student Ma Yanhong came fourth, ahead of tough Romanian opposition. The inexperienced Chinese were noticeably tired after their silver medal-winning performance in the women's team event Thursday. Many of their

NEW YORK, Nov. 29 (AP) — Freeman Williams came off the bench to score a season-high 31 points, including a layin with 16 seconds left break a 118-118 tie and propel the San Diego Clippers to a 122-120 National Basketball Association victory over the Seattle Supersonics Saturday night.

In another closely-fought encounter, Johnny Davis hit two foul shots with three seconds left to give Indiana a 92-90 victory over Washington.

Platini injured

Meanwhile, French star Michel Platini, whose free-kick propelled France to a 2-0 win over Holland will not play when France meets Cyprus in their final European Group two match on Dec. 5.

A French win would send the tricolor to Spain in 1982. Platini hurt his right thigh when he was kicked in a French League match this weekend.

Swansea wins

In London, Swansea beat Birmingham 1-0 at home Saturday night and remained second behind Manchester United in the English League Soccer Championship.

A 66th minute goal by Robbie James kept the Welsh side within two points of pacesetter United. Ipswich, who beat Manchester City 2-0 at home, occupy third place while Tottenham dropped to fourth after Brian Kilcline hit a late equalizer to give Nottingham County a 2-2 draw.

Meanwhile, Rangers who were outplayed by holders Dundee United for most of the match, scored twice in the last 16 minutes for a 2-1 victory in the Scottish League Cup final Saturday.

The Rangers hero was substitute Ian Redford. He came on for teenager Gordon Dalziel with 19 minutes remaining and hit the winner a minute from time.

Winger David Cooper gave Rangers hope with a swerving free-kick for 74th minute equalizer, then Redford stepped in with the winner as extra-time loomed.

The ball broke free to Redford 30 yards out. He spotted goalkeeper Hamish McFarlane off his line and promptly clipped the ball over his head into the net.

Jahangir topples Hunt

Although family-man Hunt now limits his tournament appearances he again dismissed any suggestion of retirement. "I will be back, so he had better watch out," said Hunt who claimed his first open victory 13 years ago.

Jahangir, latest in a long line of squash players produced by the famous Khan family rose from obscurity two years ago when he captured the World Amateur title as a 15-year-old.

Hunt, twice Jahangir's age, must have known his days as undisputed world No. 1 were fast expiring when his deceptively frail-looking rival took him to four punishing games in the London final of the British Open in April.

The Australian dug deep into his reserves to claim the Open for an unsurpassed eighth time. He knew fully well that he could only mark time while Jahangir improved over the following seven months.

Two years ago, Hunt decided to restrict his suitcase life on the international squash circuit and spend more time with his family in Melbourne. That decision probably contributed to his downfall, although it must not be forgotten that Jahangir remains the only player to beat him in a major event since.

ambitious exercises lacked the finesse displayed earlier.

China claimed their first men's world gymnastics titles Sunday. Li Yuejin struck gold when he shared first place in the men's floor exercises. And Li Xiaoping finished joint first after a three-way battle for the pommel horse crown.

Overall champion Yuri Korolyov of the Soviet Union set a blistering pace with a maximum score on the horse. Gyorgy Guczoghy of Hungary, Xioping and Michael Nikolay of East Germany then matched him with perfect 10-point scores, but Xioping and Nikolay shared the gold on the strength of higher average scores during the team events.

Alexander Dityatin of the Soviet Union, back in competition after aggravating a leg injury Friday, drew roars of appreciation from the 15,000 capacity crowd as he bobbed away from a title-winning performance on the rings.

Dityatin, all-round Olympic champion, followed up by sharing gold in the parallel bars with Japan's Koji Gushiken. Soviet teammates Artur Akopyan and Alexander Tkachov fought a fierce battle with Kiyoshiko Goto of Japan and Eberhard Gienger of West Germany for the horizontal bar title. All four scored maximum points but Tkachov clinched the gold by a narrow margin on the strength of his earlier performances.

Both women's singles finalists in the 98,000-Kroner ($14,000) tournament also were determined Saturday, setting up a rematch of the recent London Masters final.

Trevino bags Casio crown

IBUSUKI, Japan, Nov. 29 (AP) — Veteran pro Lee Trevino, of the United States Sunday won the $50,000 top prize of the first Casio World Open Golf Tournament with a four-stroke victory over Japan's top golfer, Isao Aoki.

The 41-year-old Trevino, winning his first tournament in Japan, covered the last 18 holes with a three-under par 69 giving him a 13-under par 72-hole total of 275.

It was Trevino's second triumph this season. In April he won the tournament of Champions at Rancho la Costa, California.

Trevino, one of the game's best gate attractions, had one bogey on the front nine and four birdies on the back nine for a 37-32 score on the 6,270-meter, par 72 Ibusuki Golf Club course in Kagoshima prefecture, southern Japan.

Aoki, who led the first round and tied with Trevino in the second round, had a four-round total of 279 after shooting a final round 70.

Five strokes behind the winner was Naomichi Ozaki, youngest brother of Masashi "Junho" Ozaki, at 280.

American Lon Hinkle, who placed second in the Tucson Open, shared fourth place.

Kapil, Shastri stem another slump

BOMBAY, India, Nov. 29 (AP) — The first cricket Test between England and India was evenly balanced Sunday with the home side 203 runs for nine wickets in the second innings at stumps on the third day.

India's hard-hitting all-rounder Kapil Dev, who delighted the 50,000 cricket fans at Wankhede Stadium with his elegant strokes, was leg-before-wicket to a low inswinger from fast bowler Bob Willis' last over of the day. He was the top scorer for his team with 46 hurricane runs. He and Madanlal (batting 5) took the score from 157 for eight to 203.

The match, swinging alternatively in favor of India and England from the first day, appeared headed for an early finish Sunday when India slumped to 72 for four wickets at lunch and lost its last leading batsman, Gundappa Vishwanath, early in the second session of play to send the score reeling to 90 for five.

However, a courageous sixth-wicket partnership between spinner Ravi Shastri, promoted in the batting order, and all-rounder Kirti Azad helped control the India collapse.

The Test appeared poised for an exciting and crucial day's play Tuesday after a rest day. India, 13 runs ahead in the first innings, had a lead of 216 on a deteriorating wicket that was taking some turn and keeping the ball abnormally low.

Skipper Sunil Gavaskar and new Test cap Krishnamachari Srikant opened the Indian second innings when play resumed Sunday morning. The 21-year-old Srikant, dismissed for a zero in the first innings, stepped out and played a half from Willis to gully fielder John Embury and unthinkingly remained outside the crease to adjust his pads.

Embury threw the ball at the stumps to send a bewildered Srikant back to the pavilion at the score of 19.

Next batsman Dilip Vengsarkar did not stay long at the wicket, falling victim to the vicious swing of fast bowler Ian Botham, who after wrecking India's first innings, removed the team's top batsmen Sunday.

Gavaskar, after shaping well, edged a beautiful outswinger from Botham to wicket-keeper Bob Taylor, who easily held the prized catch. In the last over before the lunch break, Sandeep Patil played against the line of the ball and was declared leg-before-wicket.

Like Patil, vice-captain Vishwanath played riskily and was caught behind by Taylor off

Botham when he held his bat out to a rising ball outside the off-stump.

Shastri and Azad confidently faced the English pace attack of Botham, Willis and Dilley. Fletcher resorted to a double spin, attack just before the tea interval in a desperate bid to end the partnership. After twice beating Azad with his spin, Embury had Azad leg-before-wicket. And after the tea break, Fletcher brought Dilley back into the attack for instant success.

The total then was 157.

BRISBANE, Australia, Nov. 29 (AP) — Australian captain Greg Chappell inscribed his fourth double century when he made 201 against Pakistan at the Brisbane Cricket ground Sunday.

Chappell's effort led Australia to a first innings total of 468 for six on a rain-shortened third day of the second Cricket Test against Pakistan.

Chappell batted for 417 minutes and hit 22 fours before falling to a catch by Zaheer in Sikander's third over. Sarfaraz had dropped Chappell, then 187, in a straight forward caught and bowled chance. That was the only chance the Australian captain had given.

Australia began the day at 282 for three with Chappell (89) and Kim Hughes (26) ready to launch their team's assault. But Imran was able to cut short the stay of the in-form Hughes with a perfect delivery that leapt between bat and pad to lay back the Australian vice-captain's off stump.

Hughes had been unable to show his best form and his 28 runs had come in 107 minutes without a four. Newcomer Dirk Wellham, a century-maker in his only previous Test, remained unsteady throughout his 36 runs in 144 minutes. But his skipper was full of praise for the promising young New South Wales batsman.

Wellham and Chappell added 131 in 144 minutes for the fifth-wicket, the most productive stand of the innings.

Chappell carried on until he was dismissed 30 minutes before tea but he never tried to take the Pakistan attack apart despite his long innings. At tea, when play was halted, Rod Marsh was on 27 and Bruce Yardley (1) had just come to the wicket.

Lendl powers his way past McEnroe

MILAN, Italy, Nov. 29 (AP) — Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl upset America's John McEnroe, ranked first in the world, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4 in the final of the Masters Brooklyn Indoor Tennis Tournament Saturday evening.

It was the third straight time this year that Lendl has beaten McEnroe, who had trouble handling the Czech player's powerful cross shots.

Lendl won the top purse of $85,000. He was ranked third in the world before the match, but the win here showed that he is improving and could move up. McEnroe received $60,000 for second place.

Lendl at 21 a year younger than McEnroe — scored his seventh straight tournament victory his season after a struggle of 1 hour 40 minutes at the Milan Sports Palace.

Showing his usual hot temper, McEnroe quarreled with his opponent about a close line call in the second set. Standing close to the net, McEnroe was booed and whistled by fans after he shouted at Lendl.

The players finished the match without further incidents, and shook hands at the end. Lendl displayed a powerful serve and hard passing shots from the baseline and forced McEnroe away from the net. The Czech was also consistent, while McEnroe made several errors and third sets by exploiting the new mistakes made by the American on his own serve. McEnroe still led Lendl 4-3 in the seven meetings they've had. He tried to slow down the Czech's pace with slice shots.

Czechoslovakia's Tomas Smid made short work of young Italian Gianluca Rinaldini 6-3, 6-1 Saturday for third place.

Smid, 32, ranked 23rd in the world, won in 45 minutes and pocketed $45,000. The 22-year-old Italian was a last-minute replacement for injured Argentine star Jose Luis Clerc. He obviously lacked experience and appeared overemotional.

On his own serve, Smid rushed to the net and volleyed successfully. On the Italian's serve, the Czech won with passing shots.

Rinaldini, ranked 234th, lost his serve twice in each set. For his fourth-place showing, he received $35,000.

Gen. Mayor of the United States used fine passing shots and deft drop shots to defeat Italian veteran Adriano Panatta 6-3, 6-4 and finish fifth.

Argentina's Guillermo Vilas suffered his fourth defeat in the tournament's four days, when Italy's Corrado Barazzutti beat him 6-1, 6-4 in a match for seventh place.

Both players committed many unforced errors in the dull, 1-hour 3-minute match. It was the Italian's first win ever against Vilas in six clashes.

In Johannesburg, top seed Vitas Gerulaitis downed Steven Denton while Jeff Borowick defeated Shlomo Glickstein in the men's singles semifinals of the Sigma Open Tennis Tournament.

American teenager Kathy Harvath beat Virginia Wade of Britain 7-6, 6-4 in women's singles semifinals before the second match between Kathy Rinaldi and South African Sue Rolinson was rained out.

The burly American Borowick out-witted Glickstein in a 120-minute marathon, with long volleys and well-placed shots that kept catching Glickstein out of position. Final score was 6-3, 6-7, 7-5.

In the all-American semifinal match, Gerulaitis easily downed Denton 7-6, 6-3 with the power and style he has shown throughout the tournament.

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 29 (AP) — A three-minute power blitz gave Chris Evert-Lloyd the momentum to reaffirm her standing as the tennis supreme in the final of the New South Wales Open at White City Sunday.

Evert-Lloyd's surge came in the first game of the third set against a nonplussed Martina Navratilova and swept the top seed to a 6-4, 2-6, 6-1 victory over her arch-rival.

After Navratilova had worked her way back into the match with a convincing second set win, Evert-Lloyd immediately proceeded to take her service apart with devastating baseline shots.

A power-laden forehand off a first serve, a forehand winner, a backhand to produce a forced error and a backhand winner down the line left Evert-Lloyd well on the way to a successful stage one completion of the bid for her first ever Australian Open title.

The 26-year-old Wimbledon champion picked up $22,000 for Sunday's win and moved a step closer to the $125,000 bonus pool first prize for the winner of the Toyota series. The win gave Evert-Lloyd a 30 point lead over Navratilova.

The 25-year-old dual Wimbledon champion, Navratilova, who defeated the U.S.' in 1975, looked to have a real edge over Evert-Lloyd on grass when she sneaked away with a service break and a 2-0 lead.

She lost her service in the next game after holding a game point and held break points in the sixth and ninth games before falling into volleying errors.

The Navratilova serve and volley style came well to the fore in the second set as she raced to a 4-1 lead and broke Evert-Lloyd's service to love in the eighth game to take the set.

"Maybe I won it too easily," the left-hander reflected, thinking back to the Evert-Lloyd onslaught in the opening game of the third set.

"I didn't give her anything — the balls were coming back very hard and perhaps I couldn't see the balls well as I should have. Once Chris gets on top she is very hard to come back against — she started going for it."

Evert-Lloyd said her ability to return Navratilova's power serves had been the key to her victory. "Martina is the best server in the game but the area so hard for her is that return of serve," she said.

Evert-Lloyd said she had seen early on in the match that Navratilova had a set plan to get to the net and had "drilled" her backhand and used the lob to upset her.

U.S.-Soviet Euromissile talks begin today

Tough bargain forecast to save European cities

GENEVA, Nov. 29 (R) — U.S. and Soviet negotiating teams met separately Sunday to prepare for Monday's opening of talks aimed at scrapping or limiting European-based nuclear missiles.

Both sides forecast tough but serious bargaining in the first-ever attempt to control medium-range weapons capable of devastating densely populated cities throughout Europe.

U.S. and Soviet officials said the talks were highly complex and that months may be needed even to settle precisely what types of weapons are to be discussed.

When veteran U.S. negotiator Paul Nitze and Soviet chief delegate Yuli Kvitsinsky meet, they will be launching the first super-power arms negotiations since President Ronald Reagan took office 10 months ago.

American officials said lower-ranking diplomats were in touch Saturday night to fix a time for the first session, to be held at the Soviet mission to the United Nations in Geneva.

But there were no plans for further contacts Sunday or for Nitze and Kvitsinsky to meet in advance of the opening session at 11 a.m. (1000 GMT) Monday.

Officials said the first encounter would probably be limited to procedural details, with the two sides unlikely to set out their initial positions until Tuesday. Meetings would probably alternate between the Soviet and U.S. missions, they said.

Nitze traveled to Hamburg Saturday for a briefing from Chancellor Helmut Schmidt on the Soviet negotiating position as set out by President Leonid Brezhnev on a visit to West Germany last week.

Schmidt told the American negotiator he was convinced that Moscow wanted to secure an arms deal, and Nitze pledged the United States was ready for "intensive, constructive and uninterrupted" talks.

On his arrival here Friday, Nitze said the U.S. stance would be reasonable but tough in what is expected to be the hardest bargaining in 12 years of U.S.-Soviet arms talks.

Kvitsinsky said Saturday the Soviet Union was ready for the "complete renunciation by both sides...of all types of medium-range nuclear arms in Europe." But he stressed that Moscow wanted radical reductions by "both West and East", a hint taken to mean he is under orders to press for British and French missiles to be counted as well as American warheads.

Brezhnev last week rejected a "zero option" offer by President Reagan to halt plans for the deployment of U.S. Pershing-2 and Cruise missiles in Western Europe if Moscow dismantles all its SS-20, SS-4 and SS-5 launchers.

The American missiles are to be sited from late 1983 in five countries — Belgium, Britain, West Germany, Italy and the Netherlands — and the NATO alliance has said the plans will go ahead unless missile cuts are agreed by that time. Schmidt has warned the Soviet Union that it must agree to the zero option or other reductions if it wants to stop the NATO deployments, a prime Soviet objective.

Although Brezhnev has turned down the total ban on major European-based medium-range systems proposed by Reagan, he has said Moscow will be ready to dismantle "hundreds" of rockets if a deal can be struck.

If the Pershings and Cruises are deployed, the United States will be able to strike at key Soviet centers — including the Kremlin — for the first time from land bases in Europe. At present the United States can hit these bases only with intercontinental ballistic missiles based in America or carried on board U.S. ships, submarines and aircraft.

Schmidt favors compromise

COLOGNE, West Germany, Nov. 29 (Agencies) — West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt Sunday urged that both sides in the Soviet-American talks on the reduction of their nuclear arsenals in Europe should build mutual confidence by taking the so-called zero option — withdrawal of all medium-range missiles from the region.

Interviewed by a Cologne radio station, Schmidt said that in his meetings with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in Bonn last week he neither "would nor could" allay Kremlin anxiety over the scheduled deployment of Cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in Western Europe late in 1983.

"The anxiety is on both sides, however," Schmidt said — and they could free themselves of it by mutually assuming the zero option. The chancellor emphasized that no compromise could be expected at Geneva "if both parties maintain their initial positions." "Positions will naturally have to be altered," he said. "This is similar to the positions of wage negotiations between trade unions and employers."

Schmidt said: "Compromises can only be achieved on the basis of clear positions. Someone who goes to the negotiating table with an unclear position cannot expect...to reach a compromise."

Schmidt said he believed West German statements had strongly impressed the Soviet Union with the West's earnest desire for negotiations. He stressed the importance his government laid on a successful outcome of the Geneva talks and said West Germany would exercise strong pressure to ensure serious negotiations.

In Bonn, where the missile debate has caused some deep cracks in government unity, politicians of all major parties welcomed the talks. Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, leader of Schmidt's coalition partners the Free Democrats, called Monday an "historic date."

The chancellor has threatened to resign if his Social Democratic Party repudiates the NATO plan, which calls for both deploying the missiles and negotiating with the Soviets. On Sunday Pope John Paul II said at Vatican City he had sent messages to Presidents Ronald Reagan and Leonid Brezhnev "to encourage mutual efforts of goodwill" at the Geneva parley. He said millions of people in the world are following the talks with "anxious expectation."

Kvitsinsky was only 34 when he was first selected for a Soviet negotiating team. Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko sent him to Berlin to help fashion the 1971 four-power agreement on the status of the city, then a focus of East-West tension.

The accord bridged irreconcilable differences between East and West on the status of the divided city. For the past three years Kvitsinsky served as No. 2 at the Soviet Embassy in Bonn, where diplomats say he was regarded with a mixture of fear and respect.

Yuli Kvitsinsky--an able negotiator

MOSCOW, Nov. 29 (R) — Yuli Aleksandrovich Kvitsinsky, who will head the Soviet team at the Geneva talks, has wide experience of negotiating with the West as well as a reputation for toughness and will. The career pattern of the Polish born diplomat leaves no doubt that he is a man of exceptional ability.

To be chosen to negotiate missile cuts with the United States at the age of 45 is a remarkable achievement in a political system run by men in their 60s and 70s. The man he will sit opposite in Geneva, Paul Nitze, is nearly 30 years his senior at 74.

About world peace, ecology

W. German youth said pessimistic

BONN, Nov. 29 (AP) — West German youth — an estimated three million — are reportedly pessimistic about the future and uneasy about certain wide issues like world peace and ecology. This mood may account partially for recent mass demonstrations as well as growing hostility to established authority.

Such are the conclusions of a voluminous report, drawn up by the Ministry for the Family, Youth and Health, called Youth in West Germany — Revolt or Refusal. For the purposes of this report, youth was defined as the 14-24 age group.

Antje Huber, the minister, refuses to paint a dramatic picture of West German youth, but admits that a growing number of young people in this country do not feel any links with the last generation and its views.

In fact, a mere 13 percent of young people felt that the present government represented their interests, according to a recent public opinion poll.

The report said that young people who could not, after all, remember either the war years or even the Cold War period afterward, were nevertheless worried by peace, housing and ecology issues. The majority (48 percent) of German youth fear a "sombre" future, while 42 percent are "confident" about it.

Other facts to emerge showed that an enormous 95 percent could not see how war could be made impossible; 80 percent foresaw a shortage of raw materials, economic crises and famine; 78 percent did not believe there would be more social and class equality; 76 percent thought that technical and chemical progress is going to destroy the environment.

The report showed young people having little interest in current political issues, about which they are rather skeptical, and becoming more and more unconventional in outlook. The youthful militants are not very numerous — 93 percent of young people are against violence, even in a last resort.

Most of them (82 percent) believe that it is "urgent" to bring in reforms to safeguard the environment. The report noted that youth's next main worry was that of unemployment, and urged: A greater effort be made to train young people, legislation to bring in higher safety norms in factories and equality of job opportunities for men and women.

The report suggested that it was "preferable" not to ignore the growing importance of the pacifist movement, and especially not to indulge in empty criticism. On the contrary, it said, the government should explain to young people West Germany's military role in the Western alliance, and its limitations within this alliance.

due for deployment in West Germany starting in late 1983. These single warhead missiles will be capable of reaching Soviet targets in about five minutes, giving Moscow almost no warning time.

— 464 single warhead Tomahawk cruise missiles, to be based in Belgium, Britain, West Germany, Italy and the Netherlands as part of NATO's five-year deployment program.

The Cruises, also due to start operating in 1983, are slowly but like the Pershings can strike at key areas in the European part of the Soviet Union.

The SS-20s have a range of about 5,000 kms, while the Pershings can fly up to 1,600 kms and the Cruises 2,400 kms.

U.S. negotiators say if a zero option dismantling cannot be achieved, they want cuts to the "lowest possible levels." They say the talks would be unnecessarily complicated if other categories of weapons were included from the start. They want the others to be discussed in later phases.

Brezhnev has indicated he will seek cuts also:

— U.S. forward-based systems including 170 missile-carrying F-111 bombers based in Britain, 300 Phantoms based in several European countries, 60 A-6 and A-7 planes on carriers in the Mediterranean, and 40 Poseidon missiles on submarines.

— 180 older Pershing-1 missiles in West Germany.

The Soviet leader has hinted he may also seek some kind of tradeoff against about 230 British and French missiles which NATO says should be treated separately.

The West says Moscow has a huge advantage — 1,100 warheads on SS-20s, SS-4s and SS-5s against only 572 medium-range U.S. missiles still to be deployed.

Brezhnev insists there is rough parity but counts only nuclear launchers, not warheads — 986 for NATO, 975 for Moscow. The United States says this count is selective and misleading, because it omits some Soviet types that should be counted and adds others on the Western side that are either shorter-range or should be included among strategic weapons.

If Moscow wants other systems to be covered by the talks, the United States has hinted it will press for inclusion of: 45 long-range Soviet backfire bombers, 350 Soviet Blinder and Badger aircraft, 30 Soviet Golf class submarines based in the Baltic, perhaps also newer SS-22s and SS-23s.

Separate U.S.-Soviet talks on strategic systems are expected to begin in February or March, probably also in Geneva. They will deal chiefly with intercontinental missiles.

The United States wants these later talks to be called "START" for strategic arms reduction talks, replacing two earlier series of "SALT" (strategic arms limitation) negotiations between 1969 and 1979. The 1979 SALT II treaty has not been ratified by the United States.

Hondurans vote for civilian rule

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Nov. 29 (R) — Hondurans voted Sunday in general and presidential elections that will end nearly a decade of military rule in this central American country.

The polls opened at 6 a.m. (1200 GMT) and officials said queues began to form shortly afterward at many voting stations. Around 85 percent of the 1.5 million registered voters were expected to turn out, though unseasonably heavy rain in some parts of the country might deter people who have to travel far, party workers said.

Iran claims big drive in southern battle area

TEHRAN, Nov. 29 (AFP) — Iran Sunday reported a major drive in the southern battle theater of the war, claiming that its forces had reached the Iraqi border in one sector.

(But in a conflicting report, Iraq said its army had penetrated further into Iranian territory on the southern war front, inflicting heavy losses on Iran.)

Radio Tehran said the operation, launched at midnight local time (2030 GMT Saturday), culminated with the arrival of Iranian forces at the border near Bostan, west of the southern town of Susangerd in oil-rich Khuzestan province.

The radio said the push also cut communications between Iraqi on the northern and southern sections of the front, and took at least 500 Iraqi troops prisoner. It gave no casualty figures.

(But an Iraqi news agency broadcast, mentioned in Beirut, said "the Iraqi armed forces are making a new advance into the interior of Iran following violent battles in the southern sector of the front, during which the Iranian enemy registered heavy losses.")

(The report, quoting a correspondent on the front, said the Iraqi defenses, and forced the enemy to retreat.)

Poland seeking power to proclaim emergency

WARSAW, Nov. 29 (R) — The Polish parliament (Sejm) is expected to be summoned into session in the next few days to debate drastic legislation to combat the country's political and economic crisis, well informed sources said Sunday.

The Sejm would be convened to consider what amounts to an order from the ruling Communist Party to grant the government special powers which could include an outright ban on strikes and imposition of a state of emergency.

The party's central committee said in a resolution adopted Saturday night after a two-day meeting that extraordinary powers were indispensable to counter destructive actions which threatened the very existence of Poland.

The resolution did not spell out the precise nature of the emergency powers but it recalled that successive appeals for an end to strikes had been ignored and followed calls for a strike ban from party leader Wojciech Jaruzelski and other speakers. The Sejm was twice held back from a ban since Polish workers won the right to strike in their August 1980 labor revolt.

But the wording of the central committee resolution appeared to give Communist deputies, who hold an unassailable majority in the Sejm, little option.

It said: "The central committee considers it necessary to equip the government with the authority needed effectively to counter destructive actions that are ruining the country and its economy, threatening the Socialist state, order and public security."

"In this connection the committee makes Communist deputies duty-bound to move for the immediate initiation of legislation on extraordinary measures to protect citizens and state."

The resolution stressed again the ruling party's commitment to encouraging the Solidarity free trade union and other forces to join a front of national accord. But many speakers at the plenum made clear that they would never tolerate the loss of Communist supremacy in Poland.

Allen wants to be relieved

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29 (AFP) — Richard Allen, national security adviser to President Ronald Reagan said Sunday that he asked to be relieved of his duties during a federal investigation into possible misconduct.

Allen said in a televised interview that Reagan understood his decision and added that he hoped to return to his post after the inquiry by the Federal Bureau of Investigation is completed.

The probe concerns Allen's receipt of $1,000 from a Japanese magazine that, according to the official account here, was to thank the president's wife Nancy for granting an interview early this year. The investigation also concerns Allen's relationship with Japanese businessmen.

Army alerted in Indian state

NEW DELHI, Nov. 29 (Agencies) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government alerted army troops and deployed paramilitary and armed police Sunday along all major highways in India's Assam state on the eve of a 12-hour road blockade agitation, the United News of India (UNI) reported.

The blockade, to begin at 5.00 a.m. Monday, has been called by leaders of a powerful, student-led movement to press their two-year-old demands for the expulsion of millions of alleged aliens from the northeastern state.

The agitators staged a 36-hour crippling statewide general strike Nov. 19 and 20 after failure of another round of talks with Mrs. Gandhi's government on settlement of their demands. One striker was shot to death by police during the strike.

Agitators leaders appealed to Assamese Sunday to squat on highways and bring road traffic to a halt. UNI said. The state government, meanwhile, wanted that it will take stern action against blockaders.

UNI reported that a bomb explosion damaged a wooden bridge on the state's main highway Sunday morning near Nowgong, 600 kms northeast of Calcutta. In another bomb blast, a government-owned bus was damaged but nobody was injured at Nowgong, the news agency said.

In an unrelated development, at least three persons were killed in a bomb explosion Sunday inside a Sikh gurdwara (place of worship) in Amritsar, in the northern border state of Punjab, the Press Trust of India reported. Police, confirming that there had been deaths, said the exact toll was not known, the agency said. The explosion brought down a major part of the place, the reports added.

The gurdwara is the headquarters of 34-year-old Sikh leader Jarnail Singh Bhindranwale, arrested early last month in connection with his alleged involvement in the killing of a 82-year-old journalist who was opposing the extremist Sikh groups' demand for creation of a Sikh homeland.

His arrest led to the killing of at least 12 persons in police firing and mob attacks. He was later released unconditionally.
